THE O M E G A

1931

PUBLISHED ANNUALLY
BY THE
SENIOR CLASS
OF THE
ANN ARBOR HIGH SCHOOL
ANN ARBOR, MICHIGAN

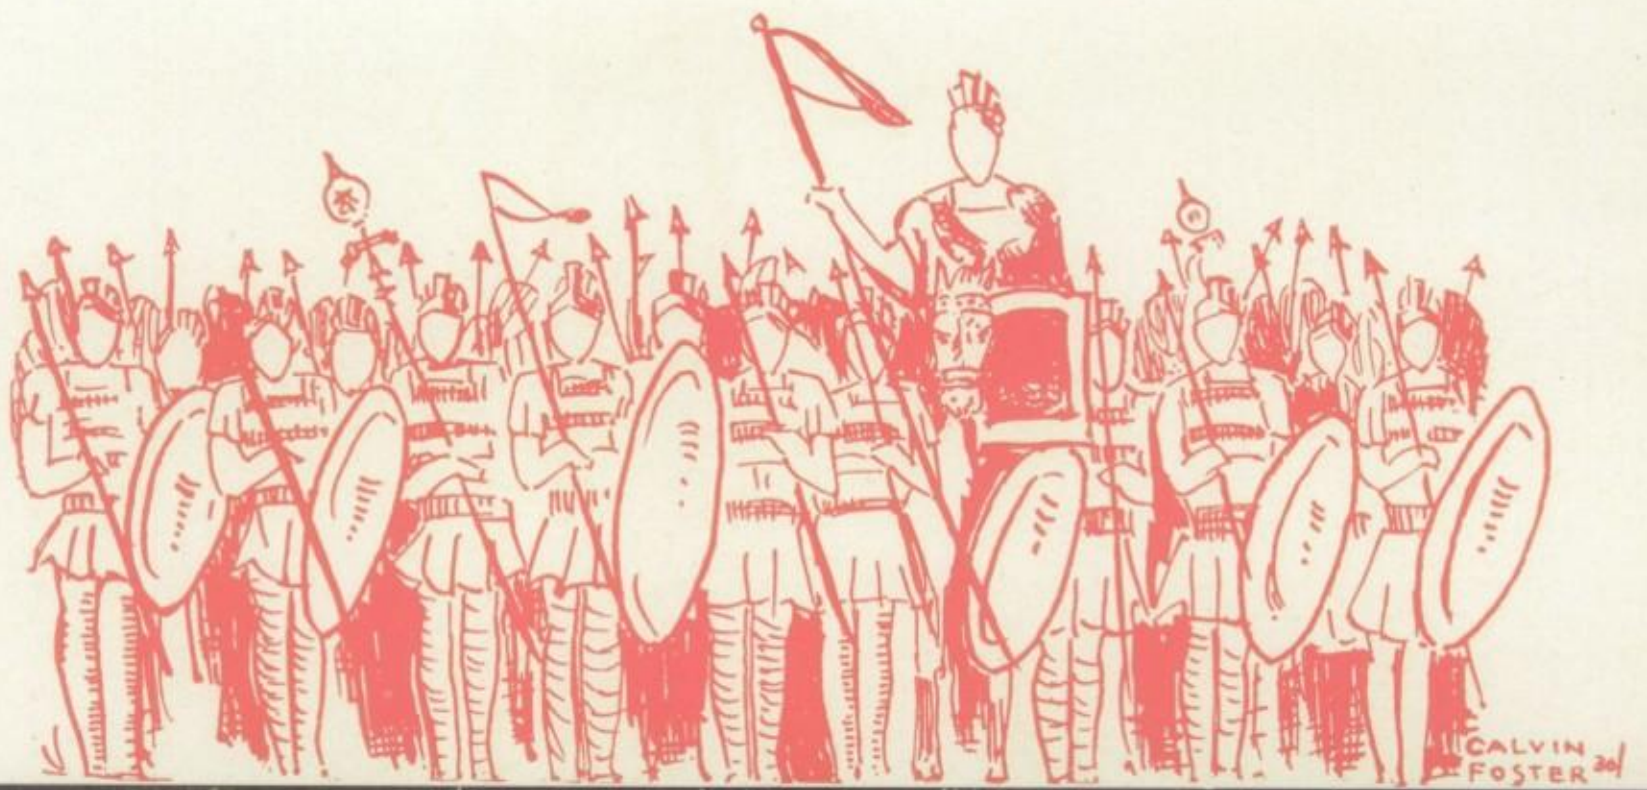

DEDICATION

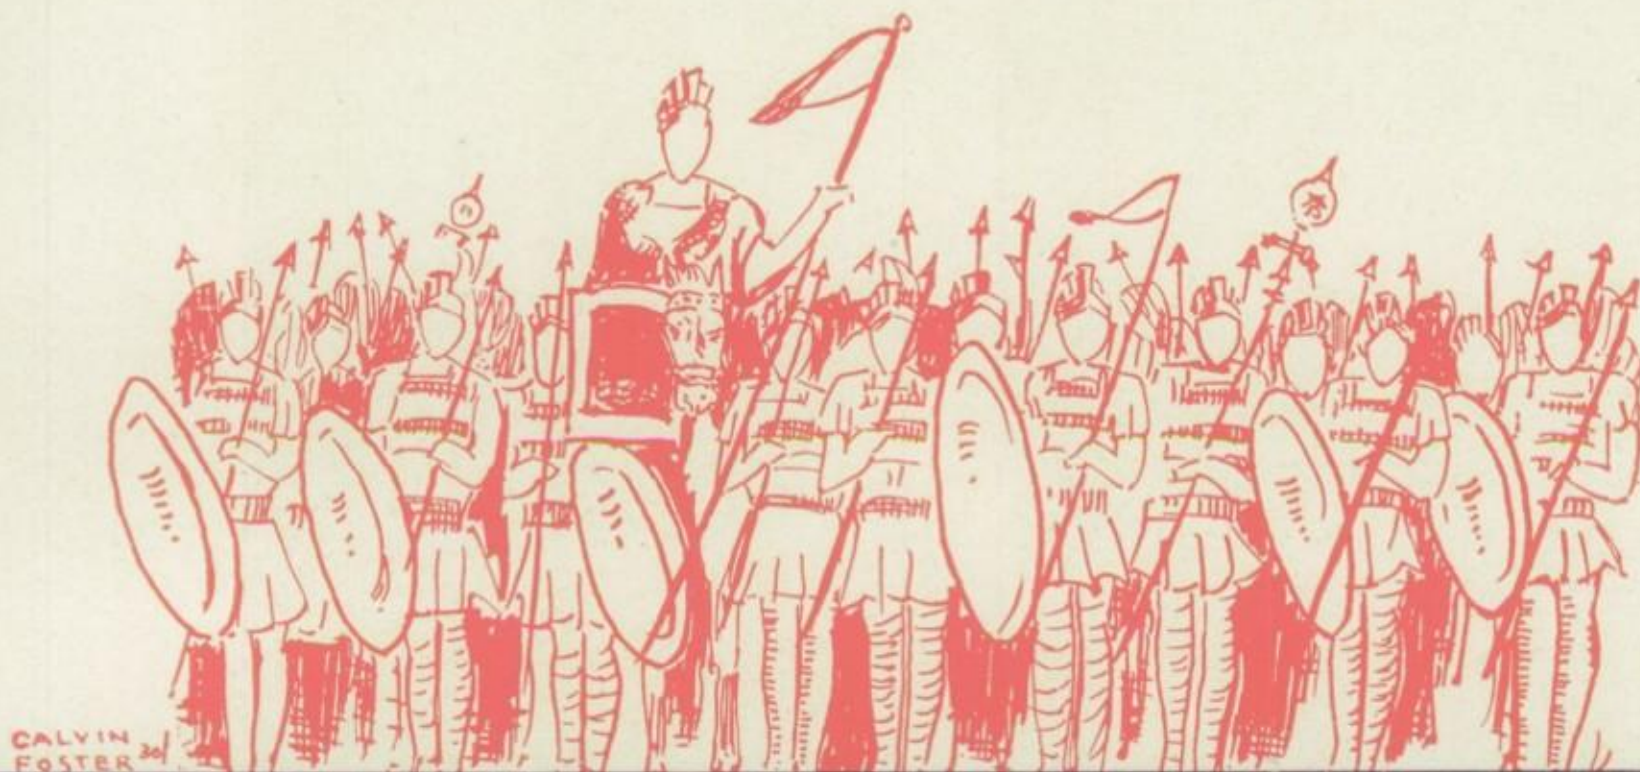

TO MISS GERTRUDE T. BREED

WE, the editors of the forty-fifth volume of the Omega, respectfully dedicate this book, in appreciation of her untiring and worth-while accomplishments both as a teacher and an adviser. It is also fitting that she who is such an appreciative scholar of Virgil should receive the dedication of this book which commemorates his anniversary. There has grown for her a kindly affection that will always make her a part of us as we look back on our high school days.

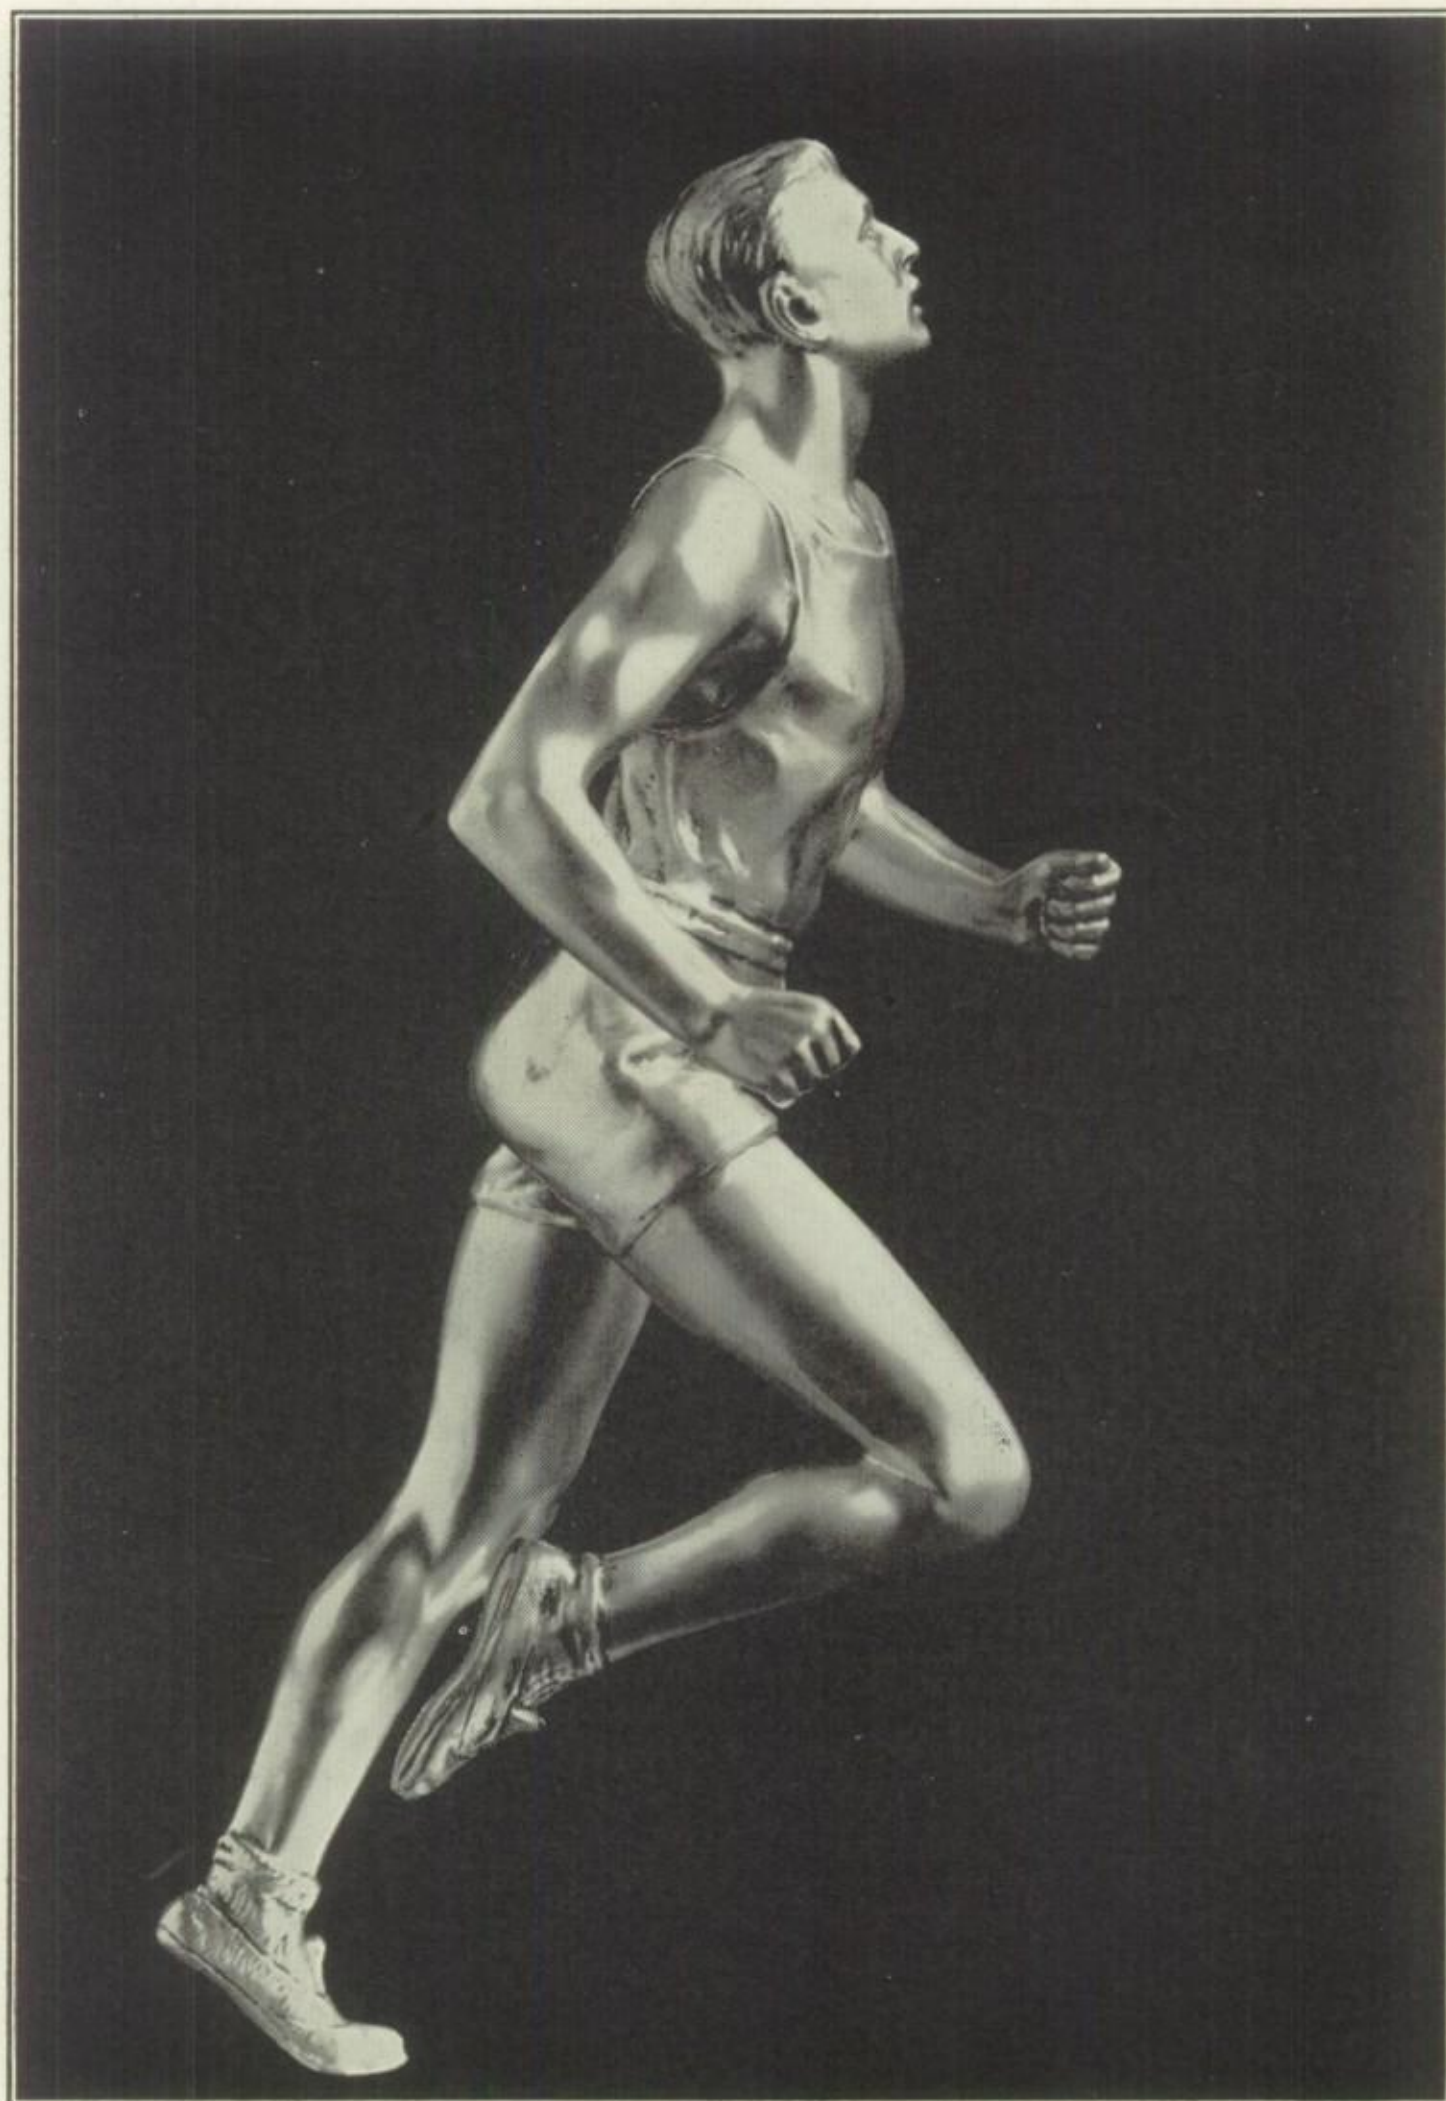

FOREWORD

TIME has rolled along again, taking with him another school year and another Senior class. Again the Omega staff presents an annual to take its place among the other books that have gone before; to bear some criticism and perhaps receive some praise; and to stand as a symbol of the efforts of the class of 1931 and a memory of the year that has just passed.

The Class of Nineteen Thirty-One

THE Ann Arbor High School this year graduated more than 200 Seniors. To pilot them through the year, the class chose Russell Dunnaback for president, Billie Griffiths for vice-president, Clarence Markham for secretary-treasurer, and Bruce Dick and Sarah Pierce for representatives. Under their efficient management the class has been most successful.

The scholastic standard of the class of '31 has always been upheld by such individual geniuses as Clarence Markham, Julia Ann Wilson, Vera Newbrough, Mary Lunny, Margaret Major, Ross Mayfield, Ruth Coles, Billie Faulkner, Billie Griffiths, and Sarah Pierce.

The Senior class has had many athletic luminaries. Those who made the first team in football were Oliver Cope, Alfred Schneeberger, John Schwemmin, Boyd Brown, Lawrence Stein, Peter Raftopulos, and Arthur Carstens, while Neil Cope captained the reserves. Peter Raftopulos, Richard Lundgren, Robert Mathis, Boyd Brown, and Russell Dunnaback shone in basketball, with Woodrow Ward and Richard White sharing honors on the second team. Ross Mayfield alone upheld the prestige of the Seniors on the swimming team. Those Seniors who formed a nucleus for Coach Ryan's track and cross-country teams were Hoyt Servis, Herman Welke, Harold Gooding, Justin Cline, and Maxwell Miles. Dan Cadagan and Justin Cline performed ably as cheer-leaders.

Billie Faulkner and Abe Zwerdling represented the school in debating, while Madalene Rabbe won honors in oratory. In dramatics Bruce Dick, Billie Faulkner, Raymond Wines, Clarence Markham, Frieda Fiegel, Billie Griffiths, and Sarah Pierce made names for themselves. The girl athletes were Carol Jones, Betty Wickett, Kathryn Bevis, and Sarah Pierce.

Vera Newbrough was general chairman of the Girls' Fancy Dress Party, and Frieda Fiegel had charge of the Senior stunt.

For Class Day the Seniors chose the following to represent them: oration, Abraham Zwerdling; prophecy, Margaret Conklin; history, Frieda Fiegel; poem, Phyllis Lutes; song, Howard Webb; essay, William Pettycrew.

The Class of Nineteen Thirty-Two

IN THE fall of 1929, three hundred students entered the Ann Arbor High School. Among them, Winifred Bell, Elnor Coles, Margaret Hiscock, Kenneth Mosier, Catherine Stitt, and Raymond Vogel have been outstanding as scholars.

Raymond Vogel, Edward Schneider, Liston Crull, Loyal Crawford, Henry Darling, Ronald Tupper, James Hickey, Laurence Stein, Howard DeHaan, Walter Kuckelman and Creel Conover all won places on the first football team, while other Juniors formed the nucleus of the second team. When Coach Taylor called for basketball material, Ronald Tupper, William Smith, Walter Kuckelman, and James Hickey were made first team men; while Louis Wenger, Woodrow Malloy, and Henry Darling proved valuable on the second team. Francis Robinson, Kenyon Brigham, Robert Pierson, Gordon Allan, Clarence Jones, Alfred Wagner, Henry Darling, Karl Krueger, and Loyal Crawford were active in cross country and track. Captain Robert Mowerson, Howard DeHaan, and Robert Hall greatly aided Coach Drake on the swimming team. Junior girls who participated in athletics are Marsinah Pierce, Betty Greve, Rosemary Klug, Merta Laing, Helen Busch, Margaret Hale, Dorothy Lyndon, Ruth Rich, Mary Kunkle, and Edith McCotter.

Margaret Hiscock and Clair Gorton, as editor and business manager of the Optimist respectively, were assisted by Norman Smith, Gerda Stanger, Tom Weller, Marian Hollister, Marsinah Pierce, Edith McCotter, Betty Greve, Catherine Stitt, William Polk, Francis Robinson, and Walter Kneer. Clifford Greve and William Smith acted as junior assistant business managers of the Omega, Alice Humbert and Alta Haab were junior assistant editors, while Calvin Foster was on the art staff. Winifred Bell was a member of the debating team, while Alice Humbert, Harlan Ritze, and Francis Robinson went out for oratory. George Burke was a member of the cheer-leading squad. Under the leadership of Margaret Rogers, the Junior girls carried off the prize at the Girls' Fancy Dress Party.

The class felt a great loss in the sudden death of one of its most loved and best known members, Ronald Tupper. Ronald was widely known as a football, basketball, and track star. He represented the best type of young manhood, and the class feels that it has lost one of its finest members.

The Class of Nineteen Thirty-Three

THE Sophomore Class, consisting of 469 members, has contributed a great deal to the school. All-A students at the end of the first semester were Margaret Brackett, Catherine Ferguson, Hildegard Gassner, Donald Gray, and Elsie Pierce. The Sophomores entering in February soon made it evident that they were not to be left behind, and Margaret Behringer and Margaret Forsythe made the twelve-point honor roll for the first five-week period.

John McConkey, Ferris Jennings, Paul Lavender, Edward Raab, and Arthur Royce won first team football positions. Max Ault, John Chomicz, Willis Crapsey, Ward Gates, Jack Gillen, John Hatto, Richard Jacoby, Earl Mann, Cedric Saylor, and Alex Wares made the second team. The track team was made up of Lawrence Betts, Haskiel Brown, Edgar Clemons, Neil Cornell, Verl Larmee, Robert Morris, Ralph Cebulski, Erwin Steeb, and Harsant Tansti from the Sophomore Class. John Kuebler and Erwin Steeb made the cross-country team. When basketball season opened, Ferris Jennings and Arthur Royce played on the first team; while Ward Goetz, Louis Landon, Peter Pegan, Calvin Seyfried, Jack Sutfin, and Walter Weid made the second team. Mr. Drake used Willis Crapsey, George Dodd, Carl Hahn, Norman Murray, Jack Whistler, Max Ault, and Glen Alexander on the swimming team.

An unusually large number of underclassmen worked on the Optimist. Hildegard Gassner, Jean Groh, Weana Lutz, Maxine Painter, Elsie Pierce, and Revilo Mosier were on the editorial staff; while Lyle Brown, Donald Gray, Alice Hiscock, and Peggy Sykes worked on the business staff.

Hilda Garlick and Alice Hiscock were elected to offices in the Girls' League. The Sophomore girls gave their Fancy Dress Party stunt under the leadership of Hildegard Gassner.

Many of the girls proved to be athletic. Lucile Behnke, Esther Carstens, Ruth Carstens, Jean Groh, Marian Hough, and Helen Palmer won places on the all-star hockey team. The all-star volley-ball team consisted of Helen Busch, Esther Carstens, Ruth Carstens, Jean Groh, Marian Hough, Lucile Behnke, Helen Bush, Mary Jane Foster, and Frances Gregg. Ruth Hurley made the all-star basketball team.

CREATIVE WRITING

Creative Writing

The Staff of the 1931 Omega feels that so many compositions of literary worth have been produced in the new Creative Writing class and the English classes this year, that a permanent record of some of them should be kept. Therefore, the poetry section of the last year's book has been enlarged to include some of the student creative prose as well.

Fleet of the Northmen

BY ALMA L. SEELY

The rhythmical dipping of oars of the Northmen
Announce the approach of the conquerors bold.
The sun glitters brightly, reflected from weapons,
From spear tips and javelins burnished like gold.
As graceful as swallows the ships skim the waters;
The figurehead sea-horses, sprinkled with spray,
Leap proudly, defiantly over the sea foam,
O'er silver tipped wave-crests in Normandy bay.

Rhythm

BY PHYLLIS LUTES

Dancing, dipping, swaying,
Slim brown body undulating
With queer fantastic grace;
Whirling in a wild abandon,
Soft arms outflung in youthful passion,
Deep eyes wide in haunted face.

What unknown throbbing rhythm
Inspires this mad exhilaration,
The music of some long forgotten race?

Jerry

By BETTY GIBBONS

IF YOU wanted a door fixed, you called on Jerry. If there were ashes to be carried away, Jerry would do it. A furnace to clean out, a lawn to trim, Jerry did it. In fact, Jerry could be called on to do almost anything around the house, from fixing an electric socket to washing the dishes. A typical "Jack of all trades, master of none."

Not tall, not short. Not very fat, and certainly not thin. Just an ordinary fellow, poorly dressed but always clean, with wrinkles worn in his face by care and worry, and yet with an ever-ready cheery smile, and a most delightful habit of saying "Howdy" to all the kids on the street.

Jerry was really not old, only about thirty-two or three, but in those thirty odd years he had learned the art of living. He had learned that a care-free, happy-go-lucky fellow is more likely to get the odd job than the whiner. He had found pleasure in knowing that his wife and two-year-old baby had good, substantial food, that there was a roof over their heads, and an insurance policy, small, to be sure, but a policy nevertheless, on which the premiums were kept up only by steadfast and persistent stinting on Jerry's part.

The last time I saw Jerry was one bright summer morning a good many years ago, when he came to mend the screen in one of our windows. While he was working, I, as usual, left what I was doing and went to watch him and to hear him talk. I loved to see how quickly his big steady hands could fix whatever needed his attention, and marveled at the fact that he never seemed to be paying any notice to what he was doing, but could tell me all about his little Peggy and what she did and how pretty she was — and in no time his work would be done.

My Mother and Dad liked to talk to Jerry, too, for they said that a half hour in his company left its effect on you for the rest of the day and made you laugh and stick out your chin when the cake in the oven fell, or when a deed you had depended on didn't go through. And Jerry never left one of these delightful little visits without a bag of cookies or a little pie for wee Peggy.

This morning, instead of Daddy's going out and sitting on the steps in the glorious sunshine with Jerry, Jerry went into the cool shade of the living room, for Daddy was sick, and was confined to the big easy chair inside. As a matter of course, conversation turned to health,—what it meant to a person, how thankful we should all be who had only occasional little sick spells, and how good it was to be just living.

Turning to Jerry, Daddy said in a bantering voice, "You don't look very sick, do you, Jerry? I guess you're good for another fifty years anyway."

Then the most astonishing thing happened, for instead of replying jokingly, Jerry sat staring blindly at his hat, a frightened, beaten man. Before Daddy had time to ask what was wrong, or what he had said that he shouldn't have, Jerry had changed again, and though his face was white and his hands trembled a little, he was his old self. Looking at Daddy with a little crooked smile, he said, "I kind of wish you hadn't said that, sir. You see, I was up to see Doctor James the other day, and, well, he — by what he said I've not got so long to live as it appears."

Then followed a lengthy and detailed description, half of which I couldn't understand, of how his white blood corpuscles had somehow overwhelmed his red ones, and there was a dreadful turmoil in his inwards. At the most Jerry had six months left to him. Six months that might have been full of pleasure had he not known—but, knowing, six months of fear and dread and torture. When he had finished there was a moment of silence in the room, broken only by my sniffing.

Soon Jerry stood up and turning to Daddy, held out his hand and said in a rather husky voice, "Well—we've all got to die some time, you know, and my turn might as well come now as later. But it is hard to leave Mary and the kid." Then, taking a deep breath and straightening his broad shoulders with a shrug, he said in a changed tone, "I'm sorry I took so much of your time,—should have known better. If that window doesn't suit you, sir, just let me know and I'll fix it up. Goodbye, kiddums," he said, turning to me, "and be good."

Then picking up his tools from the porch and stepping gaily down the steps whistling a happy popular tune, he left, stopping only to lift and comfort a sobbing and dusty little neighbor boy who had fallen on the sidewalk.

That was the last I saw of Jerry.

Old Men

BY PHYLLIS LUTES

I wonder which is best when old age comes :
To sit and quietly wait death ;
Or wait it standing up and fighting.

To dream and live in memories, and sleep ;
Or to be awake, alert and active, to the end.

I have watched old men
Go walking down the street ;
Some wander self-enrapt and slow,
And others with a trembling eager tread
And bright clear eyes.

I wonder which are happiest at the last,
And which has been the braver—
Which have lived the best ?

On After-Dinner Speeches

By NORMAN SMITH

AFTER-DINNER speaking is an old institution, probably originating in the twelfth century as a means of getting even with one's personal enemies by telling jokes to cause them embarrassment. After-dinner speaking has changed but little through the ages, and its purpose still remains that of entertainment, that is, for the listener. Anyone who has at one time or another consented to respond to a toast will know why I say "for the listener." About the best way to ruin a beautiful banquet and a lovely dinner is to have to deliver an after-dinner address. Your mind is tied to your notes. You wonder if the people will laugh at your poor jokes — they don't seem so funny now. You can't taste your food; you can't laugh with the crowd, you can't enter into the conversation. You squirm about in your hard chair — you're just plain uneasy.

Some questions arise in connection with this subject of after-dinner speeches. Why after-dinner speeches, and not before-dinner speeches? Why after-dinner and not after-breakfast? What kind of a dinner and how much is conducive to the proper mood for both speaker and listener? In answering the first, I might say that the reason they are after-dinner and not before, is because a full stomach is supposed to be conducive to loquaciousness and comprehension.

At the close of the banquet, the jolly toastmaster takes the floor. He calls the assemblage to order by rapping vigorously on one of the dainty banquet glasses with the handle of his knife. After wise-cracking for some time, he calls upon one of the speakers. The speaker glances at his half-eaten meal and at his thrice-emptied water glass, and having wiped the perspiration from his hands and brow, rises and begins thus: "Ladies and gentlemen, unaccustomed as I am to public speaking,——" This without once glancing at the hastily penciled notes daintily concealed in the perspiring palm of his left hand. After this, if another complete thought escapes without the aid of the notes, it is an accident.

But the foregoing is a description of an amateur. The guest speaker is about to be called on and the toastmaster lays himself out to consume most of the guest speaker's allotted time in his introduction. But allotted time or not allotted time, Mr. Guest Speaker has not come clear across the township to be cheated out of his say, and so he launches forth on his supreme effort.

Now that women as well as men smoke, the banquet hall may be filled with an impenetrable blue haze in just half the time it would take the men alone to do it, and if you are far enough away from the speaker, you may doze unnoticed, stupefied by food, smoke, and speech.

Once in a while one does run across a very good speaker, and these rare occasions make all the dross and drivel worth while. The law of averages proves that if you drape yourself around enough banquet tables, and do not sleep through too many after-dinner speeches, you are bound sooner or later to hear a Chauncey Depew, a Marion Burton, a Dr. Stalker, or a John Brumm, or better still, become one yourself.

Fog

By CRAIG SPANGENBERG

The fog glides in 'neath the cover of night,
And, fearing the sun, slips away at dawn.
The fog glides in, and in silence deep
Makes fairy groves of trees and towers.

The fog glides in, the buildings loom
Shrouded in ghostly, dewy robes;
The earth is ne'er more beautiful than at dawn,
When the fog glides in.

Deep Woods

By PHYLLIS LUTES

The deep cool woods were filled with a ferny smell;
And through the dead leaves peeped pale waxy flowers.
In the dimmest, greenest depth I found
A pale lavender lady-slipper;
A dainty bit of violet from a twilight sky,
Streaked with the delicate last pale fingers of light.
I would have picked the wonder,
And taken it to show,
But Mary stopped my hand and begged me
Just to look.

Fathomless

By PHYLLIS LUTES

"Just yesterday, a joyous note.
Today they wired. An accident.
If I could only go to him,
Could feel his pain,
Kiss his brow and smooth him off
To restful, quiet sleep again.
He has so much for which to live
So many years of life and love
So much of good to give!"
She prayed, and in the quiet vastness
Of the dim church depths
The tension broke; and face in tear-wet hands
She sank upon her knees
For God had said, "He rests."
Next day they told her he was dead.
All day she sat in silence.
At night she cried, "There is no God!"

Spring Call

By PHYLLIS LUTES

Oh I must be off and away,
With the wind in my face and my hair,
The wild free wind that goes dashing along,
And playfully whirls the graceful clouds
Into veils that the wood nymphs wear.
I must feel the long miles swiftly fly,
Breathe deep of the pure free air;
The freshness will leave all the cobwebs behind
And my thoughts will soar clean and clear.
A misty blue banner blows high in the sky,
The red road is winding through canyon and pine,
It leads, oh who can guess where!

Dawn

By BETTY GREVE

The winter night was black as the cloak of Pluto,
But its gloom was shattered
By the friendly smile of the watching moon—
Supreme monarch of the night.
Morning came,

And from the cold grey of early dawn
The pallid waning moon peered faintly down.
Hanging low on the horizon
He struggled bravely to hold his own
Against his rival of the East.

But at last, in a mantle of rose and gold
The haughty sun burst forth
Resplendent in his glory, triumphant.
And slowly the dying moon sank
To hide himself in the ignominy of defeat.

The Moth

By Irving Gelfond

My mortal day was short ;
Yet my entire tale is my life.
It was on a certain day during the midsummer.
The glowing sun sank low, disappearing into her depths.
My colorful, spotted body cooled.
The twilight impelled my instinct to seek shelter nigh.
I felt a forlorn creature,
But I clung beneath a leaf which hung on a lowly twig.
Mother nature was murmuring
Her secret melody which enwrapped my spirit.
In the darkness of the night
The gentle breeze comforted my exhausted being,
Soothingly my weary, clinging body.
My wings enfolded themselves and warmed me.
Suddenly a beam of light stirs and dazzles my wakeful spirit.
It flutters my wings—my eyes are illuminated by this gleaming flash.
My Spirit wakes forth from its retreat.
It rouses me out from the slumber of the night.
The Spirit dashes my body, it gnaws me,
Fluttering my wings faster.
It is my salvation, the beamlight there.
It is blind joy which spreads in the force of my life.
Rapidly in ecstasy I dash and dance endlessly around this enchanting light.
It enraptures me, magnetically.
I cannot resist. An omnipotent force
Impels and pervades me with a desire to be amidst this glowing fire.
Still it hastens my spirit, dashing me into this burning flame.
Never is it satiated or quenched until my wings and segments are charred.
I drop with dazzled joy, mingled with excruciating tormenting pains.
During my torments my eyes still glare
As they stare at the bright, alluring flame.
A dream creeps over me, enfolding me,
That my spirit has mingled with the flame.

ACTIVITIES

"The Troubador's Dream"

THE spirit of Christmas was exemplified by the students of the high school in the presentation of a play entitled "The Troubador's Dream." While the troubador, played by Justin Cline, related his dream of the birth of Christ and the coming of the three Wise Men to Margaret Hiscock, as Countess of Toulouse, the story was enacted in pantomime.

The presentation was particularly difficult to direct and manage, as much of the pantomime had to conform exactly to the story of the troubador. Miss Noble directed the play and was assisted in the stage management by Robert Lowery and Lyle Brown. Josephine Kennedy was the chairman of the costume committee.

The cast was as follows:

Countess of Toulouse	MARGARET HISCOCK
Her waiting woman ..	CATHERINE BOTSFORD
Troubador	JUSTIN CLINE
Mary	MARIAN QUA
Joseph	CHASE TEABOLDT
Shepherd	ROBERT FEINER
Salome, his wife	BILLIE GRIFFITHS
Another shepherd	RODES CLAY
Three Wise Men ..	KENNETH MOSIER, DUANE BETTS and SANFORD LADD
Joel	THOMAS WELLER
Slave Boy	GORDON BACKUS
A Bethlehemite	SARAH PIERCE

“Evening Dress Indispensable”

ON December 2 the Shakespearean Circle belied its name in the presentation of one of Pertwee's plays, “Evening Dress Indispensable,” which was a delightful comedy showing the vagaries of youth and the tribulations of older people. The plot centered around Shelia, a modern girl who desired to be quite different from other girls. Consequently she developed a Russian soul and a sense of art. Her mother, bothered with the job of getting her daughter married and keeping her own suitor, finally solved the problem after several humorous situations.

The acting honors must go to the whole cast, as each excelled in his part. The play was produced under the direction of Miss Parry, while the stage properties were managed by Bruce Dick.

The cast was as follows:

Shelia	MARY ALLSHOUSE
Alice, the Mother	JEANETTE DUFF
Jeffrey	GEORGE DODD
George	CLARENCE MARKHAM
Maid	VERA NEWBROUGH

"The Valiant"

"THE Valiant," by Holworthy Hall and Robert Middlemas, was presented by the Touchstone Club on November 18. It was an emotional tragedy in which a boy sentenced to death protects his parents from disgrace by refusing to reveal his identity. The scene of the entire play was laid in the warden's office in the prison.

William Vorwerk portrayed the condemned youth with a vividness that appealed to the sympathies of the audience. Frieda Fiegel, as Josephine Paris, who thought that the prisoner might be her brother, Raymond Wines as the prison warden, and Norman Smith as the priest were excellent in their support of the principal character. The production was cast and directed by Miss Hannan, and the stage directors were James Scott, William Goetz, and Francis Jenkins.

The cast was as follows:

Warden.....	RAYMOND WINES
Priest.....	NORMAN SMITH
Jailer.....	LEROY HIGH
Prisoner.....	WILLIAM VORWERK
Attendant.....	ROBERT MAY
Josephine Paris.....	FRIEDA FIEGEL

The Senior Play

THE Senior play of the class of 1931 was a great success. It was presented on the evenings of April 7 and 8 in the Lydia Mendelssohn Theatre of the Michigan League Building, and repeated April 30 for the entertainment of the Schoolmasters' Club when it assembled in Ann Arbor for its annual convention.

The superior nature of the Senior play was largely due to the ability of Miss Berenice Hannan of the English Department to choose members of the Senior class best fitted to the parts. The story chosen for production was "The Charm School," a light comedy by Alice Duer White and Robert Milton that presented many amusing situations which kept the interest of the audience at a peak throughout the performance. The characters were so well cast that it would be unfair to mention any one as being superior to any other.

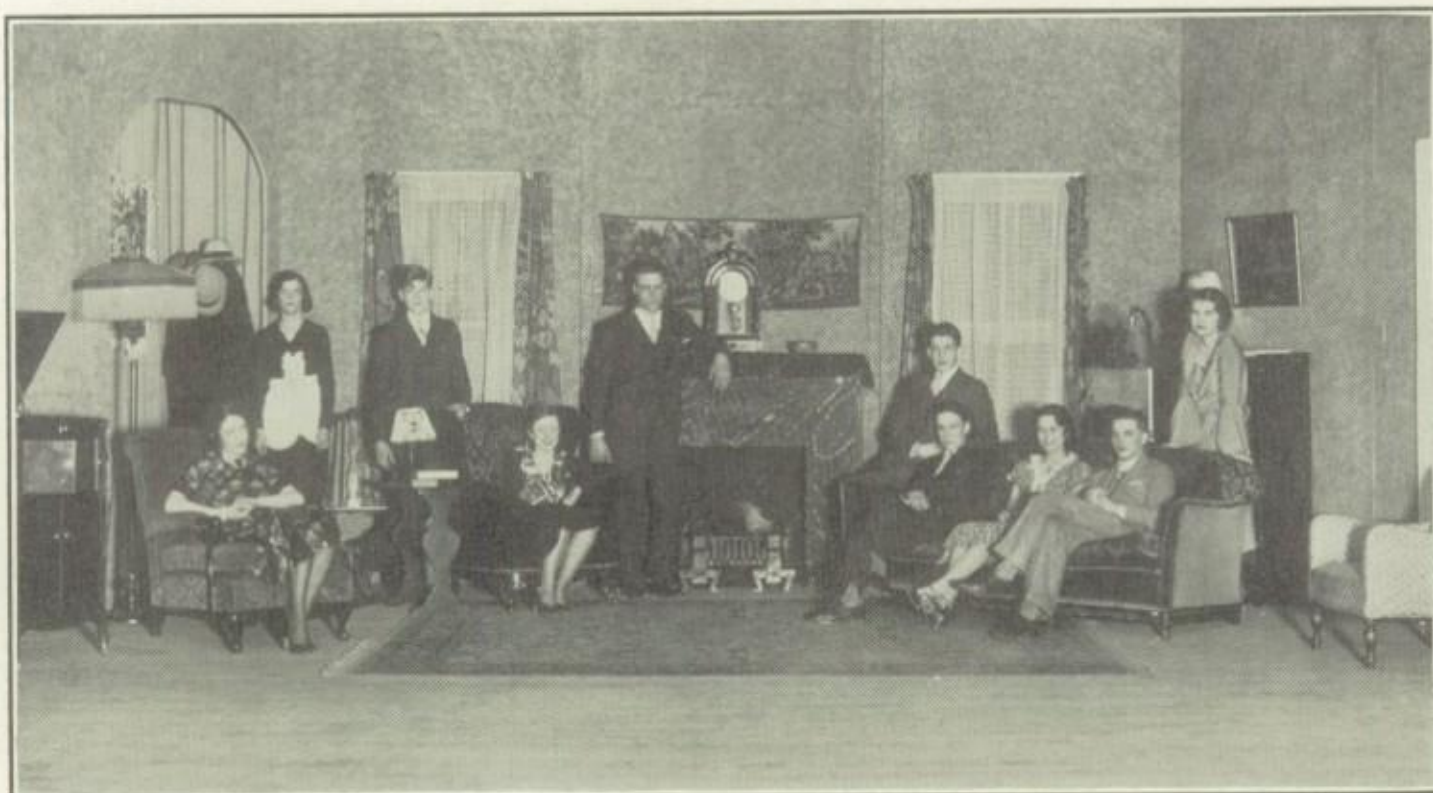

The story was about a young man, Austin Bevans, who inherited a girls' school from his maiden aunt. Austin had some ideas of his own concerning the education of pretty young girls; he considered a course in charm decidedly more essential than Greek or Latin. No doubt the idea was an excellent one, but he took some of his jobless pals down to the school to help him in his new enterprise, and the presence of eligible young men among so many lovely girls was bound to cause complications. The climax was reached when the professors fell victims to the wiles of their students, and even the invincible Principal Bevans was unable to hold aloof to Elise's charm. Although the school was a failure as far as practical education went, it produced a Senior class of charming girls—and after all, "a woman's greatest virtue is a charming manner."

The superior directing of Miss Hannan, an all-star cast, and the excellent stage facilities afforded by the Mendelssohn Theatre made possible a production that will long be remembered in the Ann Arbor High School as a challenge to succeeding classes.

“The Ghost Story”

“THE GHOST STORY,” a one-act comedy by Booth Tarkington, was presented in assembly March 17 by the Touchstone Club. The scene was laid in the home of an extremely popular girl who was trying to encourage a decidedly bashful young man to propose to her. He evaded the question until the “gang” came, and then he told a most gruesome story to scare them all away so that he could be alone with the girl. His story resulted in a fake fainting fit by the young lady. He was carried off by the crowd but returned alone to press his suit. Finally, with the help of the “gang” at the window, he asked her to marry him. The play was directed by Miss Gaynell Emery, with Norman Smith and Paul Christman as stage managers.

The cast was as follows:

The Girls' Fancy Dress Party

THE social highlight of the school term, as far as the girls are concerned, blazed brightly this year in spite of the fact that it was held on Friday, the thirteenth of February. The grand march was a gay spectacle with its old-fashioned misses, gypsies, pirates, and little girls.

First in the course of the evening's entertainment came the teachers' stunt, which was a most amusing and clever adaptation of the daily funny sheet. The Senior stunt, under the direction of Frieda Fiegel, was a picture of the course of a girl's thoughts in an evening supposedly devoted to study. An unusual feature of this year's party was a stunt given by the mothers. The alumnae stunt, of which Margaret Norton was in charge, was a snappy version of college life. The Junior stunt, under the leadership of Margaret Rogers, captured the much-coveted cup, and was a hilarious imitation of the family out for a Sunday afternoon drive. The Sophomore girls, led by Hildegard Gassner, gave a pleasing skit from "Alice in Wonderland."

Laura Burnett, who wore a lovely black Spanish gown, carried off the first prize for the most complete costume. Betty Ayres, who was dressed in a white satin creation, was chosen the best old-fashioned girl, and Sarah Pierce was judged the funniest in her characterization of Topsy.

The Band

THE Ann Arbor High School Band is steadily becoming of increasing value to the school in general. This organization during the past year played in assembly, for all of the home debates, and at the annual concert in January.

In addition, the band rendered its support at all of the home games during both football and basketball seasons, as well as accompanying the team to Jackson on Thanksgiving Day. During the football season, marked improvement was noted in marching, letter formations being attempted for the first time. It is hoped that coats may be added to the otherwise complete uniforms, thus giving the needed final touch to the appearance of the performers.

The band is slightly larger than last year, comprising forty-five members in all. But the greatest improvement lies in the quality of the musicians. This is doubtless due, in large measure, to the results of the band movement in the lower grades. Tappan and Mack Junior High Schools both have bands, and in all probability one will shortly be organized at Jones Junior High School. There is even a first grade band at Donovan School. Mr. Champion is endeavoring to stimulate growth in the woodwind section, which is composed of the piccolo, the flute, the oboe, and the bassoon, which acts in the band as the string instruments do in the orchestra.

The Orchestra

THE most significant change in the orchestra this year is that five string-basses have been added and four violas used for the first time in several years. Out of fifty members in all, twenty-five play string instruments, and as these are meant to be in predominance in an orchestra, the proportion is correct.

The orchestra has played during the year for assemblies, the Parent-Teacher Association, the Honor Banquet, The Woman's Club, the annual concert, and the state contest in May. Uniforms are now worn by the members, the girls wearing black jackets trimmed in white over white dresses, and the boys dark coats and white trousers.

The members of the orchestra have given more time to its development than most people realize. Besides the time spent outside of school by the individuals, they have played together the first hour every school day. The response shown by the students indicates an increasing interest in music. It is hoped that in time the members will receive letters for their work. Mr. Champion, who this year succeeded Miss Higbee as director of the orchestra, believes that a higher standard is being maintained as the ability of the players increases.

The Boys' Glee Club

THIRTY-SEVEN boys constitute this year's Boys' Glee Club, which rehearsed twice each week during school hours under the direction of Miss Higbee, with Harry McCain as accompanist. In addition the boys met once weekly in combination with the girls for mixed chorus work.

The Glee Club has made various public appearances during the year, singing for the Parent-Teacher Association in October, for the Woman's Association and Rotary Club in the fall in combination with the girls, and at the Christmas program. At the annual concert, January 20, the boys sang "Song of the Jolly Roger," a sea song by Chudleigh-Candish, "I Got Shoes," a negro spiritual by Freeley, and "The Gay Troubadour," by Wellesley. They also entered the state contest in May.

Don Litteer, Everett Champney, tenors, and William Buettner, bass, were chosen to represent Ann Arbor High School in the National High School Chorus in Detroit in February.

The time that is spent during the week in practicing for the glee club is certainly very much worth while, and Miss Higbee should especially be given credit for the work she has done with the boys.

The Girls' Glee Club

THIS year's Girls' Glee Club was composed of fifty-eight members. The girls met twice each week during school hours, and once with the boys for mixed chorus work. Miss Higbee acted as director and Harry McCain as accompanist.

During the year the club sang in assembly, for the Kiwanis Club, and for the Woman's Association and the Rotary Club with the boys in mixed chorus. At the annual concert in January the girls gave the following selections: "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," by Burleigh, "Dawn," by Curran, and "The Two Clocks," by Rogers, in addition to singing jointly with the boys in "Listen to the Lambs," by Dett, and "Chillen, Come on Home," by Cain.

Two girls were selected to represent Ann Arbor High School in the National High School Chorus in Detroit in February: Elsie Pruner, second soprano, and Dorothy Grimston, alto.

Miss Higbee should be complimented for the fine work she has done this year with the girls. The school is certainly proud of what they have accomplished in furnishing entertainment and winning a name for the high school in the musical field.

Debating and Public Speaking

THE Ann Arbor High School debating season was unusually successful this year. The team, composed of Abe Zwerdling, Billie Faulkner, and Winifred Bell, won the first two debates of the preliminary series, those with Birmingham and Ypsilanti respectively. The third contestant, Lansing Eastern, triumphed over Ann Arbor, but the local trio defeated Ferndale in the fourth debate.

By reason of its record in the preliminaries, the Ann Arbor team entered the elimination series. Here again the aspiring team was successful in wresting victory from the first three opponents, Lincoln Park, Mt. Clemens, and St. Agnes. The season was brought to a close March 19, when the local team lost to Spring Arbor.

A fine quality of debating was evidenced by the Ann Arbor team. Abe Zwerdling particularly, should be highly complimented upon his delivery. The loss of both Abe and Billie Faulkner by graduation in June will be keenly felt next year. Winifred Bell will be the principal support for next year's team, having completed two years of competition. Miss Ethel Wisheart, coach, is to be commended for her part in the season's record.

Madalene Rabbe represented Ann Arbor High School in oratory, while Howard Holland, also a member of the debate squad, defeated other competitors in declamation. Abe Zwerdling repeated last year's gesture in winning the school extempore speaking contest.

The Student Council

ANOTHER year has passed, and again the Student Council has experienced a successful year in fulfilling its primary reason for functioning, that is, to allow the student body, through its chosen representatives, to have a voice in the school government.

Among the most notable achievements of the Student Council this year have been the maintenance of an information desk in B corridor, the presentation of the motion picture, "With Byrd at the South Pole," and the serving of lunches to visiting teams after games and debates.

The Student Council is composed of fifteen members elected from the entire student body. The Council meets on alternate Thursdays at the noon hour, when the members have lunch together. The Athletic Board, the Non-Athletic Board, and the Disciplinary Committee, the members of which are Student Council representatives, did excellent work under the partial jurisdiction of the Council.

The Athletic Board

THE Athletic Board of the Ann Arbor High School, organized by the Board of Education in 1894, has the distinction of being the only institution of its kind in the high schools of the state to exercise complete control over all matters pertaining to athletics. The functions of the board include the arrangement of schedules, awarding of letters upon recommendation of the coaches, supervision of home games, and management of financial affairs.

The board is composed of six members: the principal, two members of the faculty elected by that body, and three members of the Student Council, chosen by it and representing their respective classes. Mr. Jocelyn for many years has been unanimously voted chairman of the organization. Miss McMullen this year took the place of Mr. Thomas Drake. It has long been a rule of the organization that at least one girl should have a place on the Athletic Board.

The board was forced to employ measures of strict economy during the past year, because of lean returns in the athletic field. Thus it has been perhaps less active than it has been in the past and doubtless will be in the future.

Standing: Mr. Forsythe, Harriett Breay, Alta Haab, Mrs. Lovejoy
Seated: Bruce Dick, Mr. Matzke

The Non-Athletic Board

THE Non-Athletic Board of Control was organized in 1894 by the Board of Education. It is one of the oldest organizations of the school. The Board exercises full authority over all extra-curricular activities with the exception of athletics. The two most important duties of the Board are to give its permission to various organizations to hold parties or other outside entertainments, and to plan school parties. The principal, two faculty members elected by the faculty and a representative from each of the three classes appointed by the Student Council, compose the committee.

The N. A. B. made a thorough investigation of the extra-curricular activities of each student in the fall. Those students carrying too much outside work were warned by the investigating committee and requested to drop some of their outside activities. The program of school parties for the year, with committees made up of faculty members and students, was planned by the board. Due to its wise choice of committees, the parties of the year were unusually successful and more popular than in the past.

The Optimist

THE Optimist, weekly publication of the Ann Arbor High School, has enjoyed a highly successful year under the tactful guidance of Mrs. Elsie Hauswald, who succeeded Mr. Drake as faculty adviser. Try-outs were held in September, at which time forty enthusiastic students turned out. Margaret Hiscock was chosen editor-in-chief, thus claiming the honor of being the first girl to hold the office in the history of the Optimist, and Clair Gorton was named business manager. He was later succeeded by Walter Kneer. The staff numbers forty-nine student members in all.

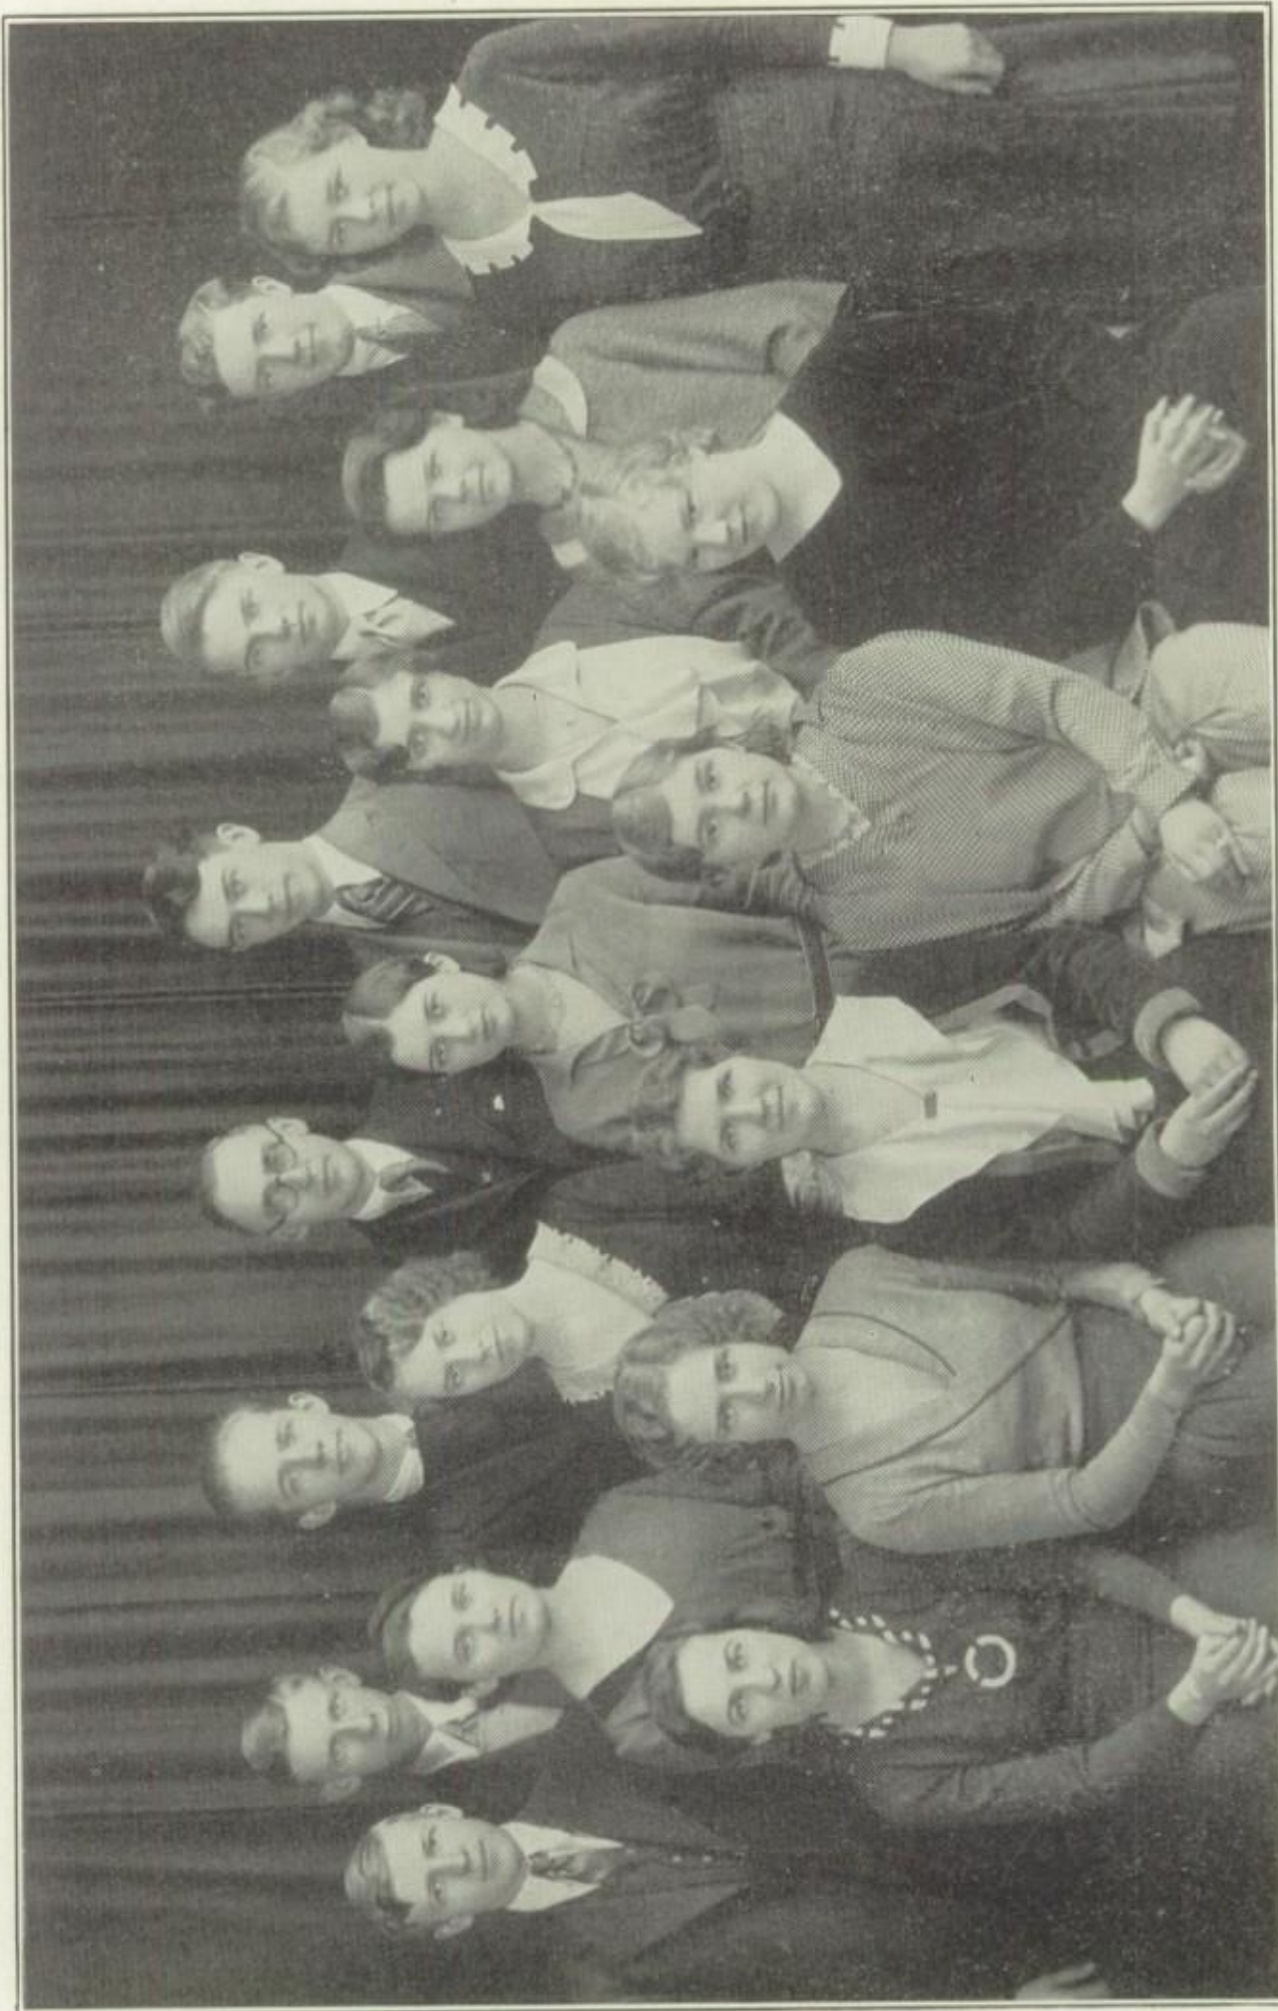

The Optimist has entered into a flourishing newspaper exchange this year, gaining many helpful ideas from other school papers. Two innovations of the year have been the society column and personals. Also two six-page issues have been published, namely, the Thanksgiving and the Christmas numbers. The usual issue is made up of four pages. During the second semester the upper staff tried out a new system, whereby the members have a free period each afternoon in the week for Optimist work, thus greatly lessening work after school hours.

In October about fifty-five attended a banquet given in the cafeteria by the Optimist for the Omega and the junior high school publication staffs. Mr. Granville acted as toastmaster, while short speeches were given by Billie Griffiths, representing the Omega, Carl Breed from the Mack School staff, and Mrs. Elsie Hauswald and Margaret Hiscock from the Optimist. Mr. Oakes of Jones School gave an interesting talk on the time-element in newspaper work.

Members of the Optimist staff entered a national contest sponsored by "Quill and Scroll," the high school journalistic honor society. Fields of competition included news, advertisements, editorials, features, headline writing, copy reading, vocabulary, and current newspaper reading. Two editorials, those of Jeanette Purchis and Margaret Hiscock, were selected to enter the contest. The topic was "The Character Traits Most Necessary to Success in High School." Margaret's editorial on "Dependability" was given third place among the Michigan entries.

Mrs. Elsie Hauswald, Margaret Hiscock, and Norman Smith attended the National Scholastic Press Association Convention in Cleveland, Ohio, in December as representatives of the Optimist. They returned with much valuable information concerning journalism, as discussed by well-informed nationally-known speakers. On March 7, Margaret Hiscock, Marsinah Pierce, Revilo Mosier, and Betty Greve journeyed to Flint to attend the annual convention for high school journalists in Southern Michigan at Flint Central High School. The purpose of the convention was to improve high school publications.

The Omega

FOR the past forty-five years the Seniors have published an annual. This year the book has been edited by a staff of sixteen members, of whom eleven are Seniors and five Juniors. The staff is as follows: editor-in-chief, Billie Griffiths; assistant editor, Sarah Pierce; business manager, Bruce Dick; Junior business managers, Clifford Greve, William Smith; Junior editors, Alice Humbert, Alta Haab; creative writing, Phyllis Lutes; quotations, Vera Newbrough; dramatics, Marie Abbot; organizations, Billie Faulkner; activities, Esther Theurer; boys' athletics, Clarence Markham; calendar, Cora Shoecraft; humor, Richard White; art, Virginia Reutter; assistant art, Calvin Foster.

As in the past three years, the Detroit Service Engraving Company has done the engraving. The art theme is based on Roman history, in celebration of the two thousand and first anniversary of the birth of Virgil, the great Roman poet. The division sheets of the book were drawn from events which Virgil has described in his Aeneid, and follow the story of Aeneas' travels, while the rest of the art work, such as the fly-leaf and border to the pages, express the spirit of Roman art in keeping with the general theme. Last year the engraving company's artist provided working drawings for the entire theme, but this year all of the art work has been done by the art classes.

Several new features have been added to the book. There is a new arrangement of snap shots, a section which contains some of the work done in the Creative Writing class which was organized in February, while an added attraction was the possibility for the owner to have his name on the cover of his book.

This year the photography was done by the Randall-Armstrong, Dey, Spedding, and Rentschler studios. In the past, the Armstrong Studio has served as the official photographer, but it was thought best this year to let the Seniors have their choice of the four.

Last year the book was printed out of town for the first time, but this year the contract has again been awarded to the Ann Arbor Press. Praise as well as thanks should be given to Miss Emery and her office practice class for their help in preparing the copy, and to Mrs. Sellards and her art class who did so much on the art work. Also Hoyt Servis and Ronald Wolf deserve thanks for taking the snapshots for the "Hall of Fame." For the first time in the history of the Omega, on the opening campaign day 600 copies of the book were sold out, so this year's book has established a new record.

To Mr. Robert Granville, faculty adviser, should go the real credit, for his good judgment, hard work, and patience make the Omega a real success.

The Honor Banquet

IN 1909 the Board of Education was host at a banquet to those who excelled in football. Since that time a banquet has been given each year for all students who have distinguished themselves in scholarship, public speaking, dramatics, music, art, journalism, athletics, and attendance. The twenty-second annual banquet was held December 5, 1930. Much credit for the success of this banquet should go to Miss Robison, Miss Parry, and Mrs. Ensminger, who valiantly headed the program committee, while Mr. Stitt, Mrs. Sellards, and Mr. Buell laboriously arranged the decorations. Also the Sophomore girls should be thanked for serving as waitresses at the banquet.

The entertainment merited the untiring efforts of the program committee. Each speaker used a proverb as the basis of his talk and the program progressed as follows:

Toastmaster	MR. ARTHUR CRIPPEN
"A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."
Attendance	RICHARD WHITE
"Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealth, and wise."
Publications	STANTON WARE
"A word to the wise is sufficient."
Scholarship	CLARENCE MARKHAM
"Learning makes a man fit company for himself."
Music and Art	JEAN FELKER
"He who sings drives away sorrow."
Music	ORCHESTRA
Public Speaking	BILLIE FAULKNER
"You would persuade me the moon is made of green cheese."
Athletics	RUSSELL DUNNABACK
"Great oaks from little acorns grow."
Dramatics	MARGARET NORTON
"All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy."
The Purple and White	EVERYEODY

The decorations for this year's banquet were worthy of praise. A Christmas design was carried out. Huge trees and evergreens were pleasant reminders of the approaching holiday season, and the soft glow from the candles lent cheer to the cold walls of the gymnasium.

*"Scarce landed, the first omens I beheld
Were four white steeds that cropp'd the flow'ry field."*

The Boys' Washington Club

SEVERAL years after the Girls' Washington Club had been founded, the boys became interested in organizing a club for themselves. This was in 1926, and since that time the boys have been going to Washington annually. This year's club has made fine progress and unlike the boys last year they are having a page in the Omega as a permanent record of their work.

To make money the boys parked cars at Wines Field during football games. They also gave a movie, "The Iron Mask," running it for both afternoon and evening showings in the Pattengill Auditorium. However, most of the work done by the boys was individual, and group work constituted but a small amount of their labors.

The Boys' Washington Club did not travel by bus as did the Girl's Washington Club, but by rail. This year the trip to Washington was not taken during the spring vacation as has been the custom. Besides the pleasure of taking this trip to Washington with a group of friends, it is an excellent opportunity for any boy who wishes to travel. The trip also gives the boys a chance to see the federal government at work.

The Science Club

THE Science Club was originally organized for chemistry students, but during its ten years of activity its membership has been increased to include all students of every science course offered.

Due to the fact that the group consists of students whose interests are divided, the programs were made as general as possible and were concerned with the practical science of the day. Many of the meetings were open to all students and were largely attended. The programs, including a talk by Professor Hobbs of the University, the annual glass-blowing demonstration, and the usual trip to the Campus Observatory, proved very interesting. Although the club is not a social organization, many good times were enjoyed during the year.

The Hi-Y Club

THIS year the Hi-Y Club was opened to all boys of the school who had a satisfactory scholastic standing, instead of to Juniors and Seniors only, as in the past. As a result the membership was nearly doubled. Those who are members in the club but are not in the picture are Sooren Aratoon, Allyn Ehnis, Phelps Frost, William Goetz, Walter Kneer, Louis Landon, Elmer La Pointe, Henry Mayer, Eugen Schuman, James Scott, Leslie Sheffold, William Smith, and Craig Spangenberg.

Several of the boys went to the state conference at Grand Rapids, where Hoyt Servis was elected president. As in the past, the boys sponsored the annual Hi-Y—Colonnade dance during the Thanksgiving holidays.

The meetings of the year proved very interesting and profitable to the members. Many speakers were obtained, among others being a nationally famous Y. M. C. A. leader. Father Iden gave a most inspiring talk.

The Colonnade Club

THE Colonnade Club is one of the most helpful societies for girls in the Ann Arbor High School. Its purpose, "To find and give the best," was well carried out in the semi-monthly meetings throughout the year. The club had one evening meeting and one afternoon meeting each month. The afternoon meetings were given over to discussions concerning health and other subjects. At the evening meetings a speaker from a foreign country was usually obtained. Among others, Dr. Koh, a Chinese student, spoke on Chinese customs, and Mrs. Pargment spoke on Russia.

The social events consisted of the Hi-Y—Colonnade dance, a Hallowe'en party, a tea for mothers and teachers, and a camping party at Clear Lake.

The Classical Club

AT the beginning of the school year, Miss Rieger was besieged by a delegation of faithful Latin students who wanted the Classical Club organized again this year. It had been discontinued in 1929; hence the reason for the delegation. Miss Rieger complied with the wishes of the students, and the club was organized with the purpose, as stated in the constitution, "To perpetuate and stimulate interest in classical subjects."

Apparently it has had a tremendously successful year, with a membership of about sixty and regular meetings every two weeks. These meetings consisted of dramatizations of mythological studies and readings from the works of famous Greeks and Romans. Once Miss Cawley spoke to the club concerning her Virgilian cruise. Several entertaining parties were held during the year, among which was a Christmas party at the home of Dorothy Lyndon.

The Foreign-American Club

THE purpose of the Foreign-American Club is to establish good will between the different nations represented in Ann Arbor High School. American boys make up about one-third of the club and represent the best citizens in school. Both the foreigners and Americans are benefited by this social contact, and consequently international peace is promoted.

The club sponsored fall and spring picnics as well as the usual Hallowe'en and Christmas parties. The eighth annual birthday dinner was held March 21 in the cafeteria. Two parties were given at the homes of Mrs. Lovejoy and Mr. Forsythe respectively.

At some of the monthly meetings the boys were entertained by speakers on international questions, but for the most part the time was spent in social activities which served to promote the feeling of friendship between the participants.

The Girls' League

THE Girls' League is the only club of its kind in the Ann Arbor High School. It is purely a social organization, and every girl in the school is eligible for membership. The sole object of its members is to enjoy themselves and create sociability. In order to accomplish this purpose, a party is planned for every month in the school year.

Unfortunately, the club was not organized until rather late in the first semester; hence it was not so active as it has been in the past. However, five decidedly successful parties were arranged, and met with the enthusiastic support of the club members. Dancing was the chief form of entertainment on these occasions, although several short plays and skits were presented with great success.

The Touchstone Club

PERHAPS no high school organization is able to look back upon a more successful year than is the Touchstone club.

The first tragedy presented by either of the dramatic clubs for many years was given by the society early in the school year. This play was "The Valiant." After being given with tremendous success before the school assembly, it was repeated for the benefit of the high school Parent-Teacher Association and later in the Michigan League at the regular meeting of the A. A. U. W. During the second semester Touchstone presented "The Ghost Story," which was also very successful.

The programs presented at the regular meetings of the club were much more carefully planned than those of previous years, the members being entertained by a series of one-act plays. On one occasion, Miss Amy Loomis, of the University of Michigan play-production department, gave a talk. The annual Touchstone-Shakespearean dance and the annual club picnic were the two social events of the year.

The Shakespearean Circle

THE two largest projects of the year in the Shakespearean Circle were the semester plays given in assembly. The first semester a very successful play, "Evening Dress Indispensable," was given; and the second semester an equally clever play, "The Unseen," was presented, along with a short skit. Several new projects were undertaken, among which was the making of a small stage on which was a scene from "The Taming of the Shrew." This was exhibited in the library during the national book week.

Since the cafeteria has been remodeled so that it contains a curtained alcove suitable for dramatic productions, the Shakespearean Club has held its meetings in this place. This arrangement has been a great asset to the meetings and has enabled several of the programs to consist of presentations by the club members. Many speakers have been obtained to speak before the club. Several meetings have been entirely devoted to social activities, while a part of each meeting is devoted to this sort of entertainment. The Circle usually joins into social activities with Touchstone Club. This year the annual Shakespearean-Touchstone Dance was held shortly after spring vacation and was as great a success as ever.

ATHLETICS

In Memoriam

Ronald Tupper 1914-1931

Ronald Tupper was born in Saginaw, Michigan. From there he moved to Pinckney, and then came to Ann Arbor in 1926. At this time he enrolled in the Tappan Junior High School, where he soon became prominent in athletics. When he entered High School in 1929 he proposed to continue in this field. Football and basketball were the two sports in which he was most interested. As a Sophomore, he gained a place on the reserve football team and accomplished an unusual feat by making a place on the first basketball team. At the close of the basketball season Ronald entered track, where he continued to gain honors. His Junior year found him an outstanding athlete of the first rank. As an athlete he built up a large circle of friends who knew as well as his team-mates that he played the game squarely. His death was a blow from which it is hard to recover. Yet long after the wound has healed, the memory of a fine fellow, athlete, and class-mate will remain.

Justin Cline, Howard Holland, George Burke, Dan Cadagan, Sanford Ladd

The Cheer Leaders

FEW people realize or appreciate the task undertaken by the cheer leaders. There is a very small number of students who have the ambition and nerve to work hard and evince the full enthusiasm which they feel by leading the cheering. It would seem that this job of coaxing cheers from fellow students is one which does not receive its due reward. These boys do indeed add much to the team's pep and often seem to work almost as hard as members of the team. Certainly their assistance is appreciated by members of the athletic teams and the Student Council, which is indirectly responsible for the maintenance of the squad.

The group of leaders this year consisted of Bill Bedford, Justin Cline, George Burke, Sanford Ladd, Howard Holland, and Dan Cadagan. Their work was especially praise-worthy as only one member of the squad, Dan Cadagan, had served before. Some of these boys led cheers at all the home football, basketball, and baseball games, as well as at debates. Many times one or more of them went to the out-of-town games and led cheers there also. These boys deserve much credit for their efforts, and all of them will return for further service next year except Justin Cline and Dan Cadagan.

Cross Country

AT FIRST, the prospects for the cross country team looked dark, for many of the mainstays of last year's team had graduated; but a turn-out of fifteen candidates made prospects brighter. Coach Ryan's proteges made an excellent record this year. The team, led by Captain Hoyt Servis, competed in two dual meets, the "Five A" meet, the regional, and the state meet.

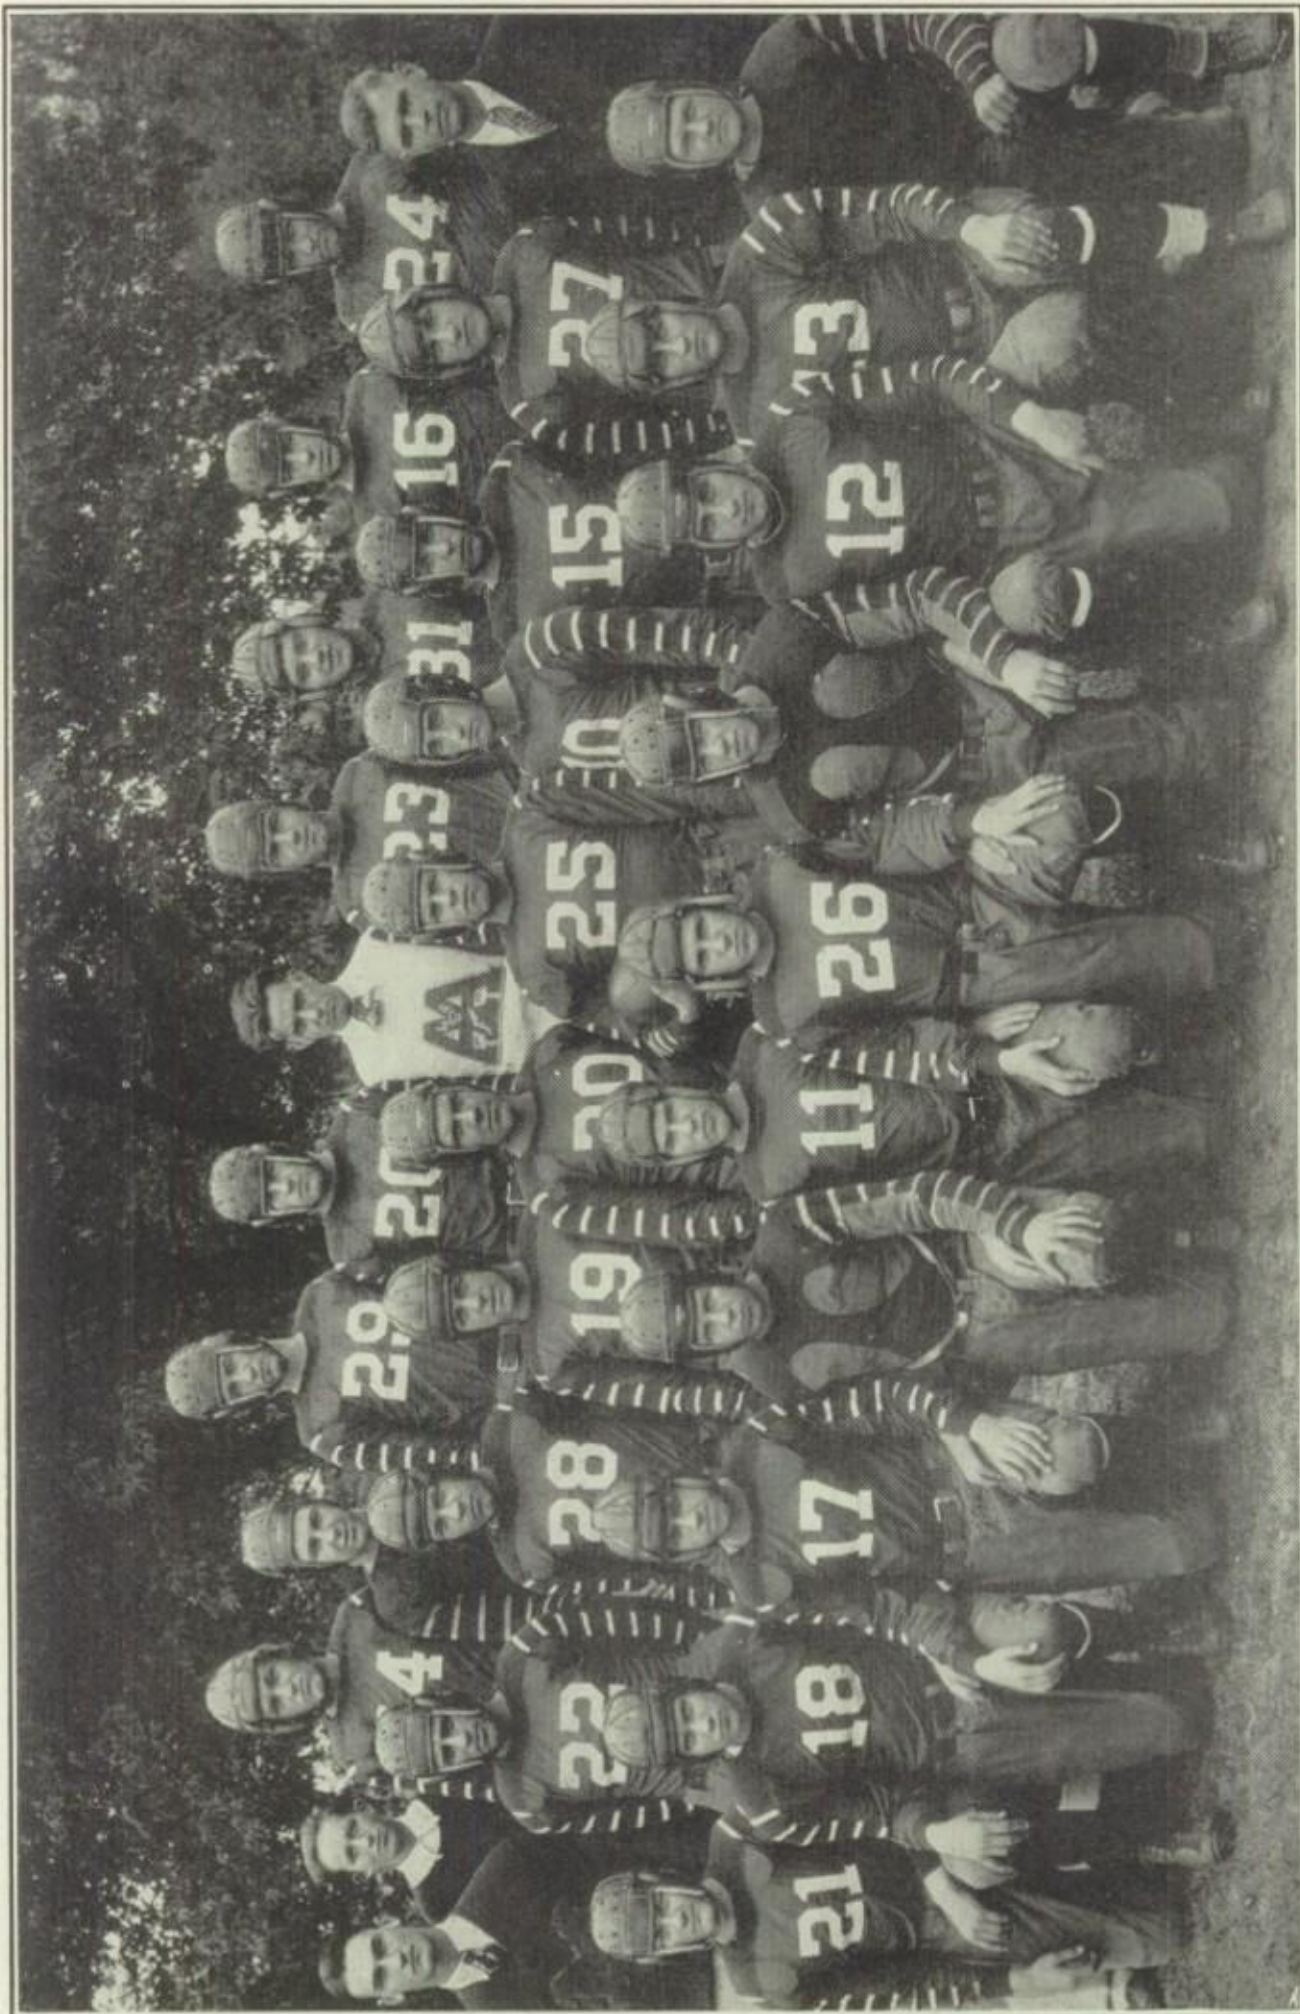

The first meet with Flint Northern, held over a new course, was lost 20-35. The next was run at Dearborn and although Captain Servis broke the tape first to tie the course record, the meet was lost by the score 24-31. At the "Five-A" meet Ann Arbor won, but unfortunately the meet had to be re-run. In the regional, at Ferndale, the team tied for third place and thus qualified for the state meet, which was held at Ypsilanti. Here Servis ended his high school cross-country career by placing first. Then the "Five-A" meet was re-run, and Erwin Steeb came in third to help Ann Arbor win.

Next year the team should be strong, as only Welke and Hoyt Servis will be lost. Captain-elect Steeb hopes to equal the fine records of previous years; and other team members, including Place, Hammial, Robinson, Allen, and Krueger will aid him.

Football

THIS year's football season started with a bang when Coach Hollway had a turn-out of seventy-one, which is the largest ever recorded. Of this group only Conover, Darling, Brown, Captain Cope, and Stein were letter-men. However, when Conover injured his head and Jennings his shoulder, and Crawford, Schwemmin and Darling suffered from broken noses, the season ceased to look so bright. Spirit and fight were not lacking in this huge squad, as the regulars soon proved their ability and swiftly turned into a smoothly functioning machine under the expert tutelage of Coaches Hollway and Taylor.

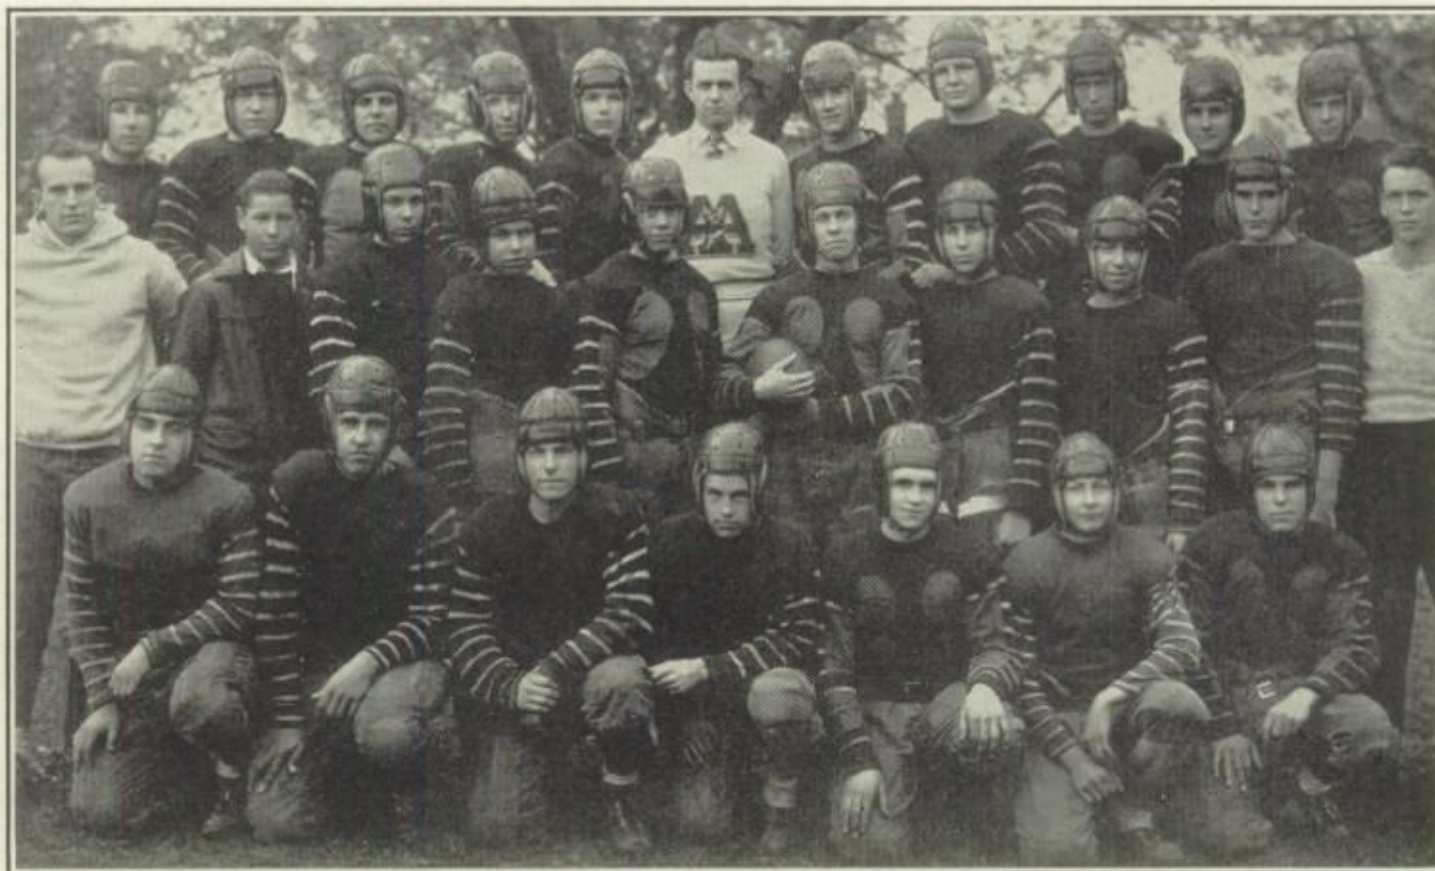

The opener of the season was won by the narrow margin of 7-6, with Wayne serving as the opposition. Jennings and Brown both starred in the backfield, while Captain Cope was a bulwark on defense among the linemen. The game with Ypsi Central proved to be a walk-away for Ann Arbor with a final score of 26-0. The stars this time were again Brown and Jennings, with Royce added to the list. The whole line showed great improvement. The Saginaw Eastern team, however, proved to be more serious opposition, defeating the locals in a close game by a score of 13-6.

Ann Arbor next met an unusually strong team in Muskegon and was snowed under, 20-0. The score indicates poor playing, but cold weather and fumbles broke the hearts of local fans. Pontiac also had a strong team and trounced the Ann Arbor fellows by a 21-6 score. Raab, a new man, and McConkey showed up well in this game. The team next journeyed to Flint to play Flint Northern and succumbed after a bitter struggle by the score of 31-0. Royce did some brilliant punting. The warriors of Lansing Eastern displayed an excellent passing attack and won 25-0. However, the team revived and showed what it could do in the game with Owosso by winning 29-6. Tupper and Royce starred in a successful aerial attack. McConkey and Kuckelman were new stars and skirted the ends well in spite of the wet field. The last game, however, played in the Prison City, was lost, although the Purple and White warriors put up a spirited battle. Jackson's state championship team won, 25-0. The game was played on a cold day and fumbles were numerous.

It would seem that many games were lost this year, but all the teams played were among the best in the state, while Flint Northern and Jackson along with Hamtramck became co-holders of the 1931 state football title. Considering the quality of their opponents, the Ann Arbor footballers made an extremely fine showing, handicapped by having few letter-men and nearly all new material.

Although the squad will lose many valuable men in Captain Cope, Kruidenier, Brown, Raftopulos, Spangenberg, Schwemmin, Hickey, Carstens, and Stein, there will be Captain-elect Creel Conover, Crawford, Jennings, Lavender, Royce, Kuckelman, Raab, Vogel, McConkey, Darling, Crull, DeHaan, and Crapsey as well as the reserves to carry on next year.

Reserve Football

IN addition to serving as very capable opponents for the first team and taking hard knocks so that the regulars might be made better, Ann Arbor High's reserve football team made a fine record for itself. These boys proved in their games that they knew football, had plenty of fight, and would furnish much fine material for the first team next year. In fact their fine defense cut the scoring to only fourteen points against them.

The fine season of the second squad started out with a bang in the rout of Pinckney by a 25-0 score. In the next game the reserves managed to eke out a small margin in a 6-0 defeat of the larger, stronger team of Manchester. The game with Ypsilanti's second team was won by the substantial margin of 13-0. St. Thomas, however, with one of the best teams in years, came through in the last minute of play to make a heart-breaking touchdown after Ann Arbor had just tied the score, and won 14-7.

In the last game of the season, the veteran reserves showed their quality and fight. They trampled an Ypsi team which was composed of first team regulars for part of the game by the overwhelming score of 32-0.

Swimming

ONLY a few letter-men returned this season to act as the basis for Coach Drake's swimming team. These were Captain Mowerson, Cope, Hall, Vogel, Showler, Sergeant, and Manager McNary. Numerous new and capable swimmers tried out, however, and the team was soon ready for competition after practicing steadily at the Y. M. C. A. and Intramural pools.

The first meet in which Ypsi Roosevelt opposed the Purple and White was lost after a hard struggle, 38 to 26. The next meet was dropped to Ypsi Central, 51 to 23. Jackson also trounced the team without difficulty, 48 to 26. The next two meets were with Lansing schools, Lansing Central and Eastern, and were lost by the scores of 51 to 11 and 53 to 16 respectively. Ann Arbor then spruced up and defeated University High 48 to 22. The very next meet Battle Creek won 58 to 12. The team then competed in the Five-A Meet, where Captain Mowerson captured the only point by placing third in the 100-yard free-style. No points were secured in the State Meet, which ended one of the poorest seasons Coach Drake has had. His best performers were Mowerson in the short swims and relay and Mayfield in diving. The Shaler Beebe medals this year are to be awarded to Bob Hall, Howard DeHaan, and George Dodd, gold, silver, and bronze respectively.

The Gymnastic Team

THE gymnastic team was organized some years ago, and since then such great interest has been evidenced in this sport that it has come to assume a position of importance in Ann Arbor High School athletics. Coach Drake intended to have two teams at the beginning of this year, but two of his stellar performers, Jack Showler and Stanley Bush, later were unable to compete. Jack dislocated a vertebra when he fell from the high-bar and Stanley became ineligible. This left Ross Mayfield, Phelps Frost, and Robert Lowry, who all performed very well. Coached by Mr. Drake and "Hilt" Ponto, the boys swiftly rounded into shape.

The team displayed its ability on two occasions, first in a dual meet with Monroe, and second in the state meet. Ann Arbor's team journeyed to Monroe to be defeated by the score of 435-372. This was an excellent performance because the boys were all inexperienced and were competing against a team of veterans. The Monroe boys later became State High School Gymnastic Champions. The boys also made a very creditable showing in the state meet in competing against the veteran performers of other schools. They made fourth place and see chances for a higher place next year.

The team will retain two men, Frost and Lowry, and will lose one when Mayfield graduates in June.

The Leaders Corps

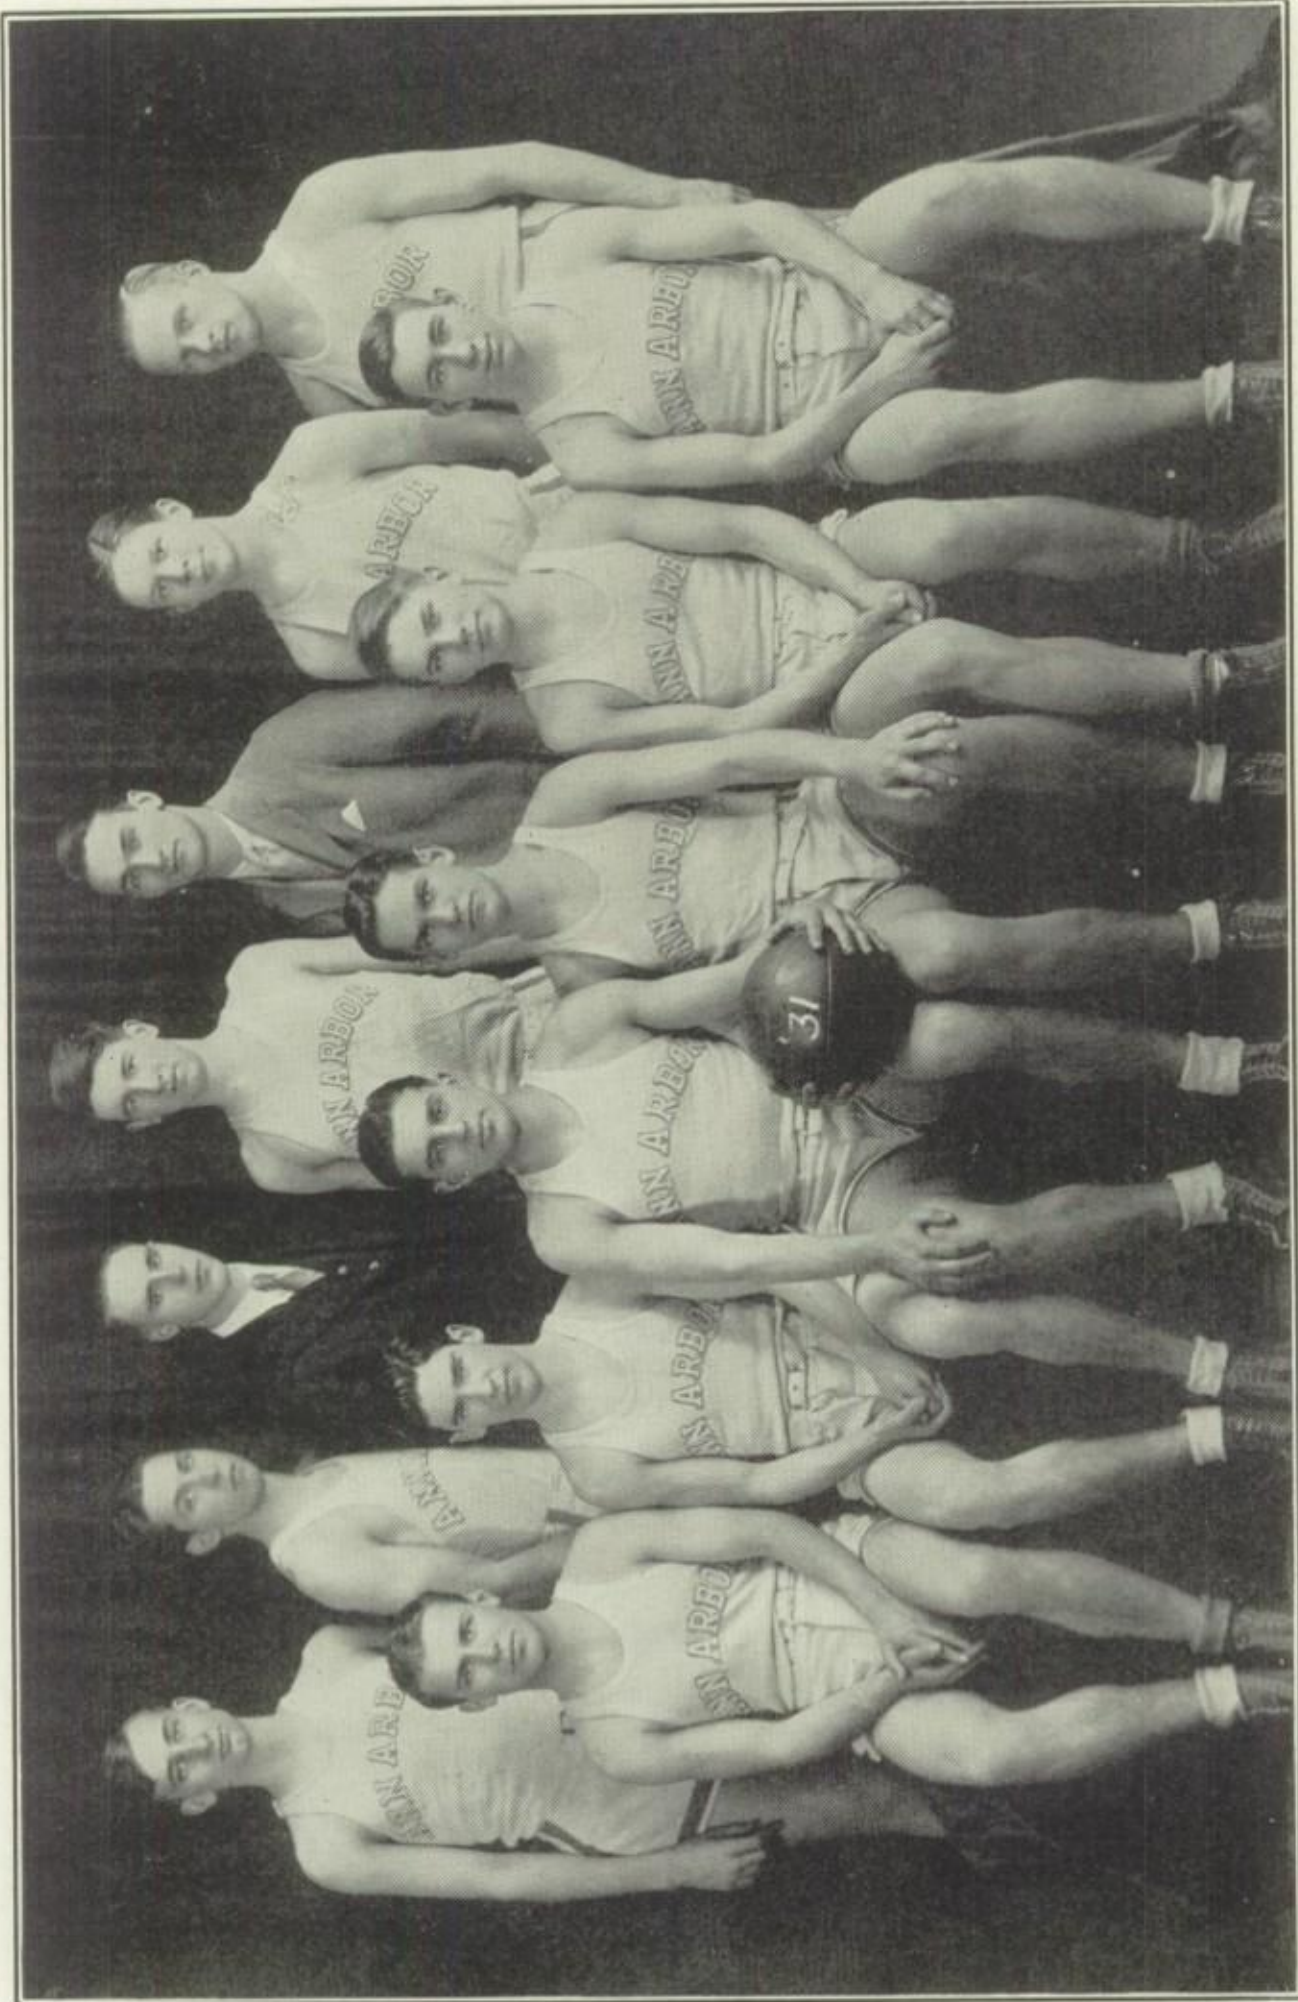

SINCE being established about eleven years ago by Coach Olds, the Leaders Corps has grown into an organization which provides a means by which the boys may do gym work and exercise, and yet not spend the time required to be on a major team. This group is controlled by the gym instructor, Mr. D. D. Drake, and meets on Tuesday of each week. The purpose of the Leaders Corps is to have a group of good athletes, especially gymnasts, and boys who will be capable of taking charge of classes if called on to do so.

The group this year was about twenty-five in number, and in it there were a few Seniors, most of the boys being Juniors or Sophomores. This fact makes it probable that the competition for gym-team positions will be exceedingly keen next year. Coach Drake thinks this year's squad is one from which a good team of tumblers will develop for next year, and also finds in his analysis of the group that there are a number of good class-leaders. Besides developing leadership in the boys, their work in class is valuable to the instructor. The boys learn to work in unity with each other in their meetings, and the gym classes coöperate better under their leadership.

Basketball

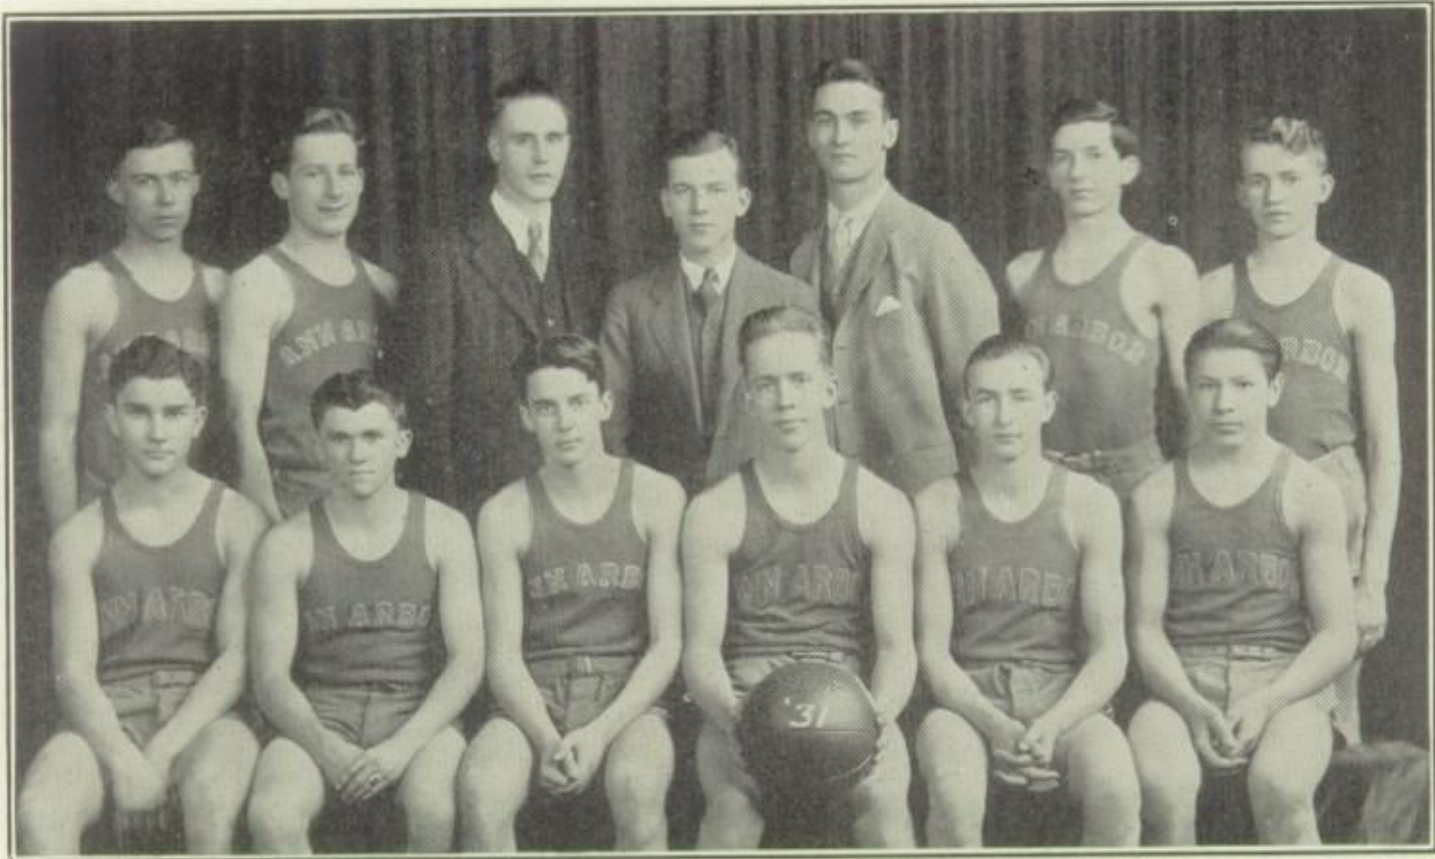

THE court squad was hard hit by graduation last June, and of the five iron men, only Captain-elect Peter Raftopolus was still in school. Coach Taylor expected a large turn-out for basketball after the unprecedented number which had come out for football in the fall, but the boys did not turn out in great numbers. Nevertheless, those who did were capable players, so that Taylor was compelled to cut only a few. The first and second squads were soon chosen and the coach rapidly polished the boys into a smoothly functioning machine. Returning from last year's second squad besides Captain Raftopolus were Dunnaback, Hickey, Brown, Tupper, Smith, Jennings, and Lundgren; the newcomers were Landon, Kuckelman, and Royce.

The first game of the year was the annual struggle between the alumni and the regulars. This was exceedingly close and exciting for an opener. Menefee for the alumni played well, while Jennings showed his ability at guard, and both teams played a hard, fast, game. After this warming-up, the team journeyed to Fordson, where Fordson's more experienced veterans overcame them 24 to 16. In the next game Battle Creek defeated the boys by a score of 25 to 17, mainly because of their inability to stop one speedy colored boy named Letts, who garnered sixteen points. Next the team played U. of D. High, and waking up after its previous defeats, conquered by the score of 26 to 18. In playing Lansing Central at Lansing, after capturing a nine-point lead early in the game, the boys eased up to lose 24 to 22 in the last minute of play. The next game, with Jackson, was lost 15 to 14 after a hard fight in which Brown and Captain Raftopolus starred. This was the last game on the home floor for Brown, Dunnaback, and Raftopolus.

The team now journeyed to Port Huron, to be defeated 18 to 16 after a terrific struggle, but the following week vanquished Muskegon on the home floor in another close game, 20 to 17. Lansing Eastern, however, took the wind out of Ann Arbor by defeating her 30 to 18. The team was further depressed by another defeat at the hands of Battle Creek, 28 to 17, but came back to avenge these defeats in the next game by winning over Lansing Central in two overtime periods, 24 to 22. Royce and Tupper starred. In defeating Lansing Central, the locals vanquished a team which was destined to be a finalist in Class A in the state tournament.

Next Ypsilanti was overcome 18 to 13, but at Lansing Eastern the team lost 24 to 11 to a hard-playing team. The last game on the regular schedule, with Pontiac was cancelled because of the untimely death of Ronald Tupper, one of the best players on the squad. Handicapped by their grief over this unexpected loss, the team was defeated in the first regional competitions with Lansing Eastern, 27 to 20. Of the regulars only two, Captain Lundgren and Hickey, will be lost to next year's team by graduation; hence the school may expect a more successful team next year.

Reserve Basketball

AN unusually large number of men were kept on this year's reserve basketball team, and it proved its worth by making an excellent record. Coach John Kagey had some good material which he developed to the fullest extent. Some of the fellows who starred for the second team were Wenger, Mathis, White, Ward, and Pegan; while among the newer players Malloy, Weid, Landon, Sutfin, Wares, and Goetz showed promise. The second team's season was one of close games and hard-fought battles.

The season opened with the Fordson game; this resulted in a one-point defeat, 23 to 22. Battle Creek was next and after another bitter struggle, Ann Arbor's Reserves were vanquished 15 to 11. The next opposition however proved mediocre and the boys conquered the U. of D. Reserves, 27 to 8. The purple and white boys next defeated Lansing Central, 13 to 11; then Jackson fell in a closely contested battle 14 to 13. St. Thomas, however, sadly trounced the Ann Arborites in the next game, 27 to 8. But fighting hard to prove their worth after this defeat they first defeated Chelsea 27 to 12 and next Lansing Eastern's reserves 15 to 14.

Baseball

BASEBALL is a recently inaugurated sport in the Ann Arbor High School, for it is only two years old. Last year's successful team was composed of a number of excellent players, but most of them graduated, leaving only Captain Cope, Ross Mayfield, and Ferris Jennings as the nucleus for the new squad. Coach Taylor, however, proved his ability to build up strong teams from green material, and the fellows came through the season in fine style. Reserves from last year who were available were Robert Mathis, Ward Goetz, Gordon Schroeder, Charles Westenfeld, Richard Jacoby, and John Hatto. There were also some new boys who had just come from Junior High and who developed into regular players.

As was done last year, the team was financed partially by the weekly contribution of the students so that no admission was charged for the games. Despite the newness of the sport in Ann Arbor High, everyone was interested in the team which made a good showing in its ten-game schedule.

This schedule was as follows: Ypsi Central April 24, Flint Northern May 2, Plymouth May 9, Ypsi Roosevelt May 12, Monroe May 16, Ypsi Central May 22, Ypsi Roosevelt May 26, Howell May 29, Adrian June 2, Plymouth June 6.

Walter Wied, William Smith, Woodrow Malloy, Clarence Markham, Frank Conklin

Golf

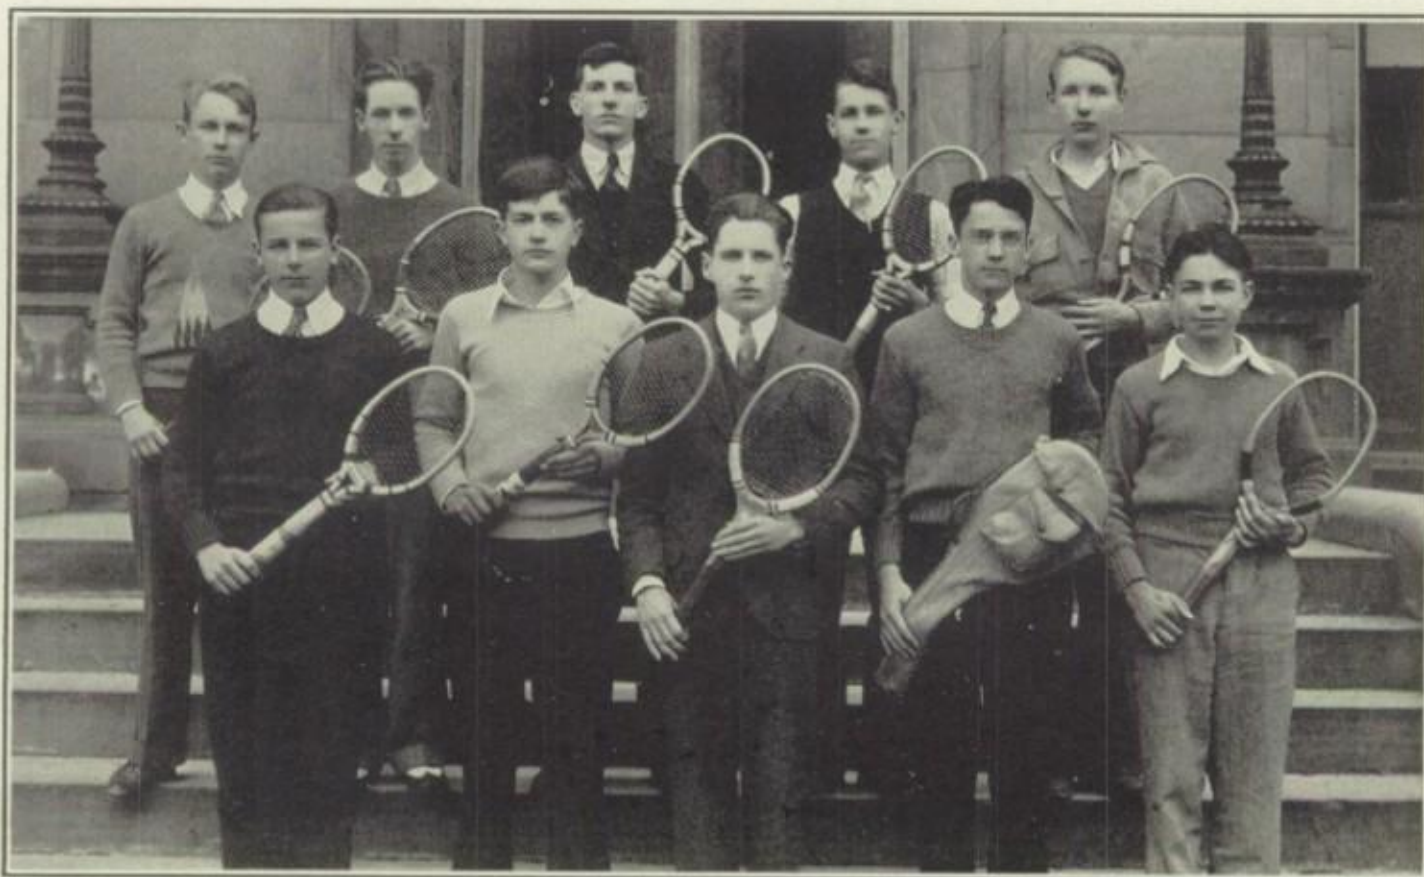

THREE years ago golf was introduced as a minor sport in the Ann Arbor High School. The teams have done so well that interest in golf is rapidly increasing.

Coach Hollway, who has charge of the team, lost only one man, Charles Meneff, by graduation last year. This left three veterans, Woodrow Malloy, William Smith, and Clarence Markham, who carried on through a successful season with the help of Frank Conklin and Walter Weid.

This year an unusual number of matches were scheduled. There were dual matches with Jackson, Flint Central, Pontiac, University High, Ypsi Central, and Ypsi Roosevelt. Beside these there were a "Five-A" meet, a Regional meet, and a State meet.

In every match in which the team competed, it successfully upheld the high school name. Woodrow Malloy, who was elected captain, was the team's outstanding player and played excellent golf throughout the season. The entire five, however, are to be commended on their scores and fine showing which furthered the reputation they had gained in tournaments during the summer of 1930. It was a blow to the team to lose Woodrow Malloy, "Bill" Smith, and "Cal" Markham at the end of the year.

Tennis

TENNIS, under the leadership of Coach Drake, has steadily increased in popularity at Ann Arbor High. Every season the tennis team makes a fine record. Of the excellent squad of last year, only Woodrow Ward, and Victor Kayser remained to form the nucleus of this year's group. After keen competition among the large number of newcomers who turned out for the squad, Max Frisinger, Louis Landon, Max McHenry, Charles Nordman, Raymond Carry, and Craig Spangenberg won places.

This year a full schedule was arranged. There were matches with Lansing Central, Lansing Eastern, Battle Creek, Jackson, Ypsi Central, Ypsi Roosevelt, the "Five A" meet, the Regional meet, and the State meet. The season resulted in one of the most successful that the tennis team has experienced.

This is the first time that the team has had its picture in the Omega, and it certainly deserves the recognition, for the boys worked hard and diligently both in preparation and matches. Only remnants of this year's excellent squad are left after graduation, which took Victor Kayser, Woodrow Ward, Max Frisinger, Max McHenry and Craig Spangenberg.

Top Row: Gordon Allen, John Schwemmin, Herman Welke, Coach Ryan, Clarence Reddeman (manager), Loyal Crawford
Second Row: Haskiel Brown, Sanford Ladd, Harsant Tantsi, Raymond Vogel, Maxwell Miles, Edgar Clemons, Verl Larmee, Richard White, Karl Kreuger

Track

COACH Ryan's track team lived up to its reputation this year despite the loss of such stars as Peter Zahner, Floyd Wakefield, and Harry Mathews. Ryan developed many capable performers, and his indoor season showed his ability as a coach. With Captain Wagner as the most outstanding performer, Darling and Steeb were consistent point-winners.

The indoor season opened with the defeat of Detroit Eastern here by a score of $57 \frac{2}{3}$ to $38 \frac{1}{3}$. Welke, Servis, Schwemmin, and Crawford became ineligible after the Detroit Eastern meet due to the semester ruling, but the team crashed through to victories regardless. Wyandotte was next defeated 57 to 11. In a triangular meet with Flint Central and Flint, Ann Arbor garnered 57 points again, to 34 for Northern and 30 for Central. The next meet with Toledo Scott proved to be the only indoor defeat, $56 \frac{1}{2}$ to $38 \frac{1}{2}$. The last meet of the indoor season was with Dearborn, which was defeated $72 \frac{2}{3}$ to $22 \frac{1}{3}$. The outdoor season scheduled a dual meet with Pontiac, the U. of M. Invitational, the Regional, the Five-A, and the State meets.

One of the most outstanding feats of the season indoors was the breaking of Ted Hornberger's mile record by Hoyt Servis, who reduced it three seconds to 4:42.

The Girls' Athletic Club

THE Girls' Athletic Club endeavors to draw the interest of each girl to some phase of athletics. Interclass games, such as hockey, basketball, and baseball; or the individual tournaments, such as tennis, ping-pong, and miniature golf; or the winter outdoor sports, such as ice hockey and skiing present a varied field of athletics which is of interest to every girl in high school.

The club has successfully finished its fourth year with a membership of sixty girls. Any girl is eligible to membership who has made one major class team. The insignia of the club is the G. A. C. arm band. Other awards sponsored by the club are emblems for making the all-star teams, the Leaders Corps arm band, and the A.A., which is the highest award, won by earning 750 athletic points. A silver loving cup is also awarded each year to the class which wins the highest number of points in intramural tournaments.

The Girls' Leaders Corps

THIS year's Girls' Leaders Corps followed the rule set last year, that each girl must pass seven tests before she could become a recognized member. This stimulated interest, and consequently the club has had a larger membership than ever before.

Since the Senior girls do not take gymnasium work the Leaders Corps offers an opportunity for them to continue their instruction in organized physical education.

The girls are taught the technique of refereeing all sports. Before any girl can referee in a real game, she must pass a test on the rules of the game. This year for the first time Leaders Corps members have refereed inter-school games in the junior high schools. The girls are also taught how to conduct classes, stunts, and all kinds of athletics contests. The increased success of the Leaders Corps this year has been largely due to the efforts of Miss Youngquist, the faculty adviser.

Girls' Hockey

TO climax an unusually successful hockey season, a mythical all-star team was chosen from the best material of the three contesting class teams by the three captains. To be a member of the all-star team is a very great honor; to win such a position a girl must have proved herself able to coöperate with her team and give her best to the game.

The first game of the season, played on October 13, resulted in a victory over the Junior class by an unexpectedly strong Sophomore team. The Seniors were an easy prey to both Sophomore and Junior teams. However, the close Sophomore-Junior game again drew the center of interest. The fledglings emerged victorious, chalking up three scores to the Juniors' one, thus clinching the championship.

The players of the winning Sophomore team were as follows: Helen Palmer, Lela Kroh, Doris Lindenschmidt, Jean Groh, Marian Hough, Elsie Pierce, Ruth Carstens, Esther Carstens, Ruth Hurley, Lucille Behnke, and Agnes Zebbs.

Girls' Basketball

EACH year girls' basketball becomes more popular and the competition becomes keener. This year enough girls turned out from the Sophomore and Junior classes to organize two reserve teams, a thing which has never been done before. Before any girl could make either the reserve or the first team, she had to pass seven tests to show that she had a complete knowledge of basketball.

At the beginning of the second semester the teams were picked, and the first game was played between the Sophomores and the Juniors. The fledglings displayed an unusually strong team, defeating the Juniors by a score of 15-19. The second game again brought victory to the Sophomores, this time against the Senior team. The Juniors then took revenge for their defeat at the hands of the Sophomores by winning over the Seniors.

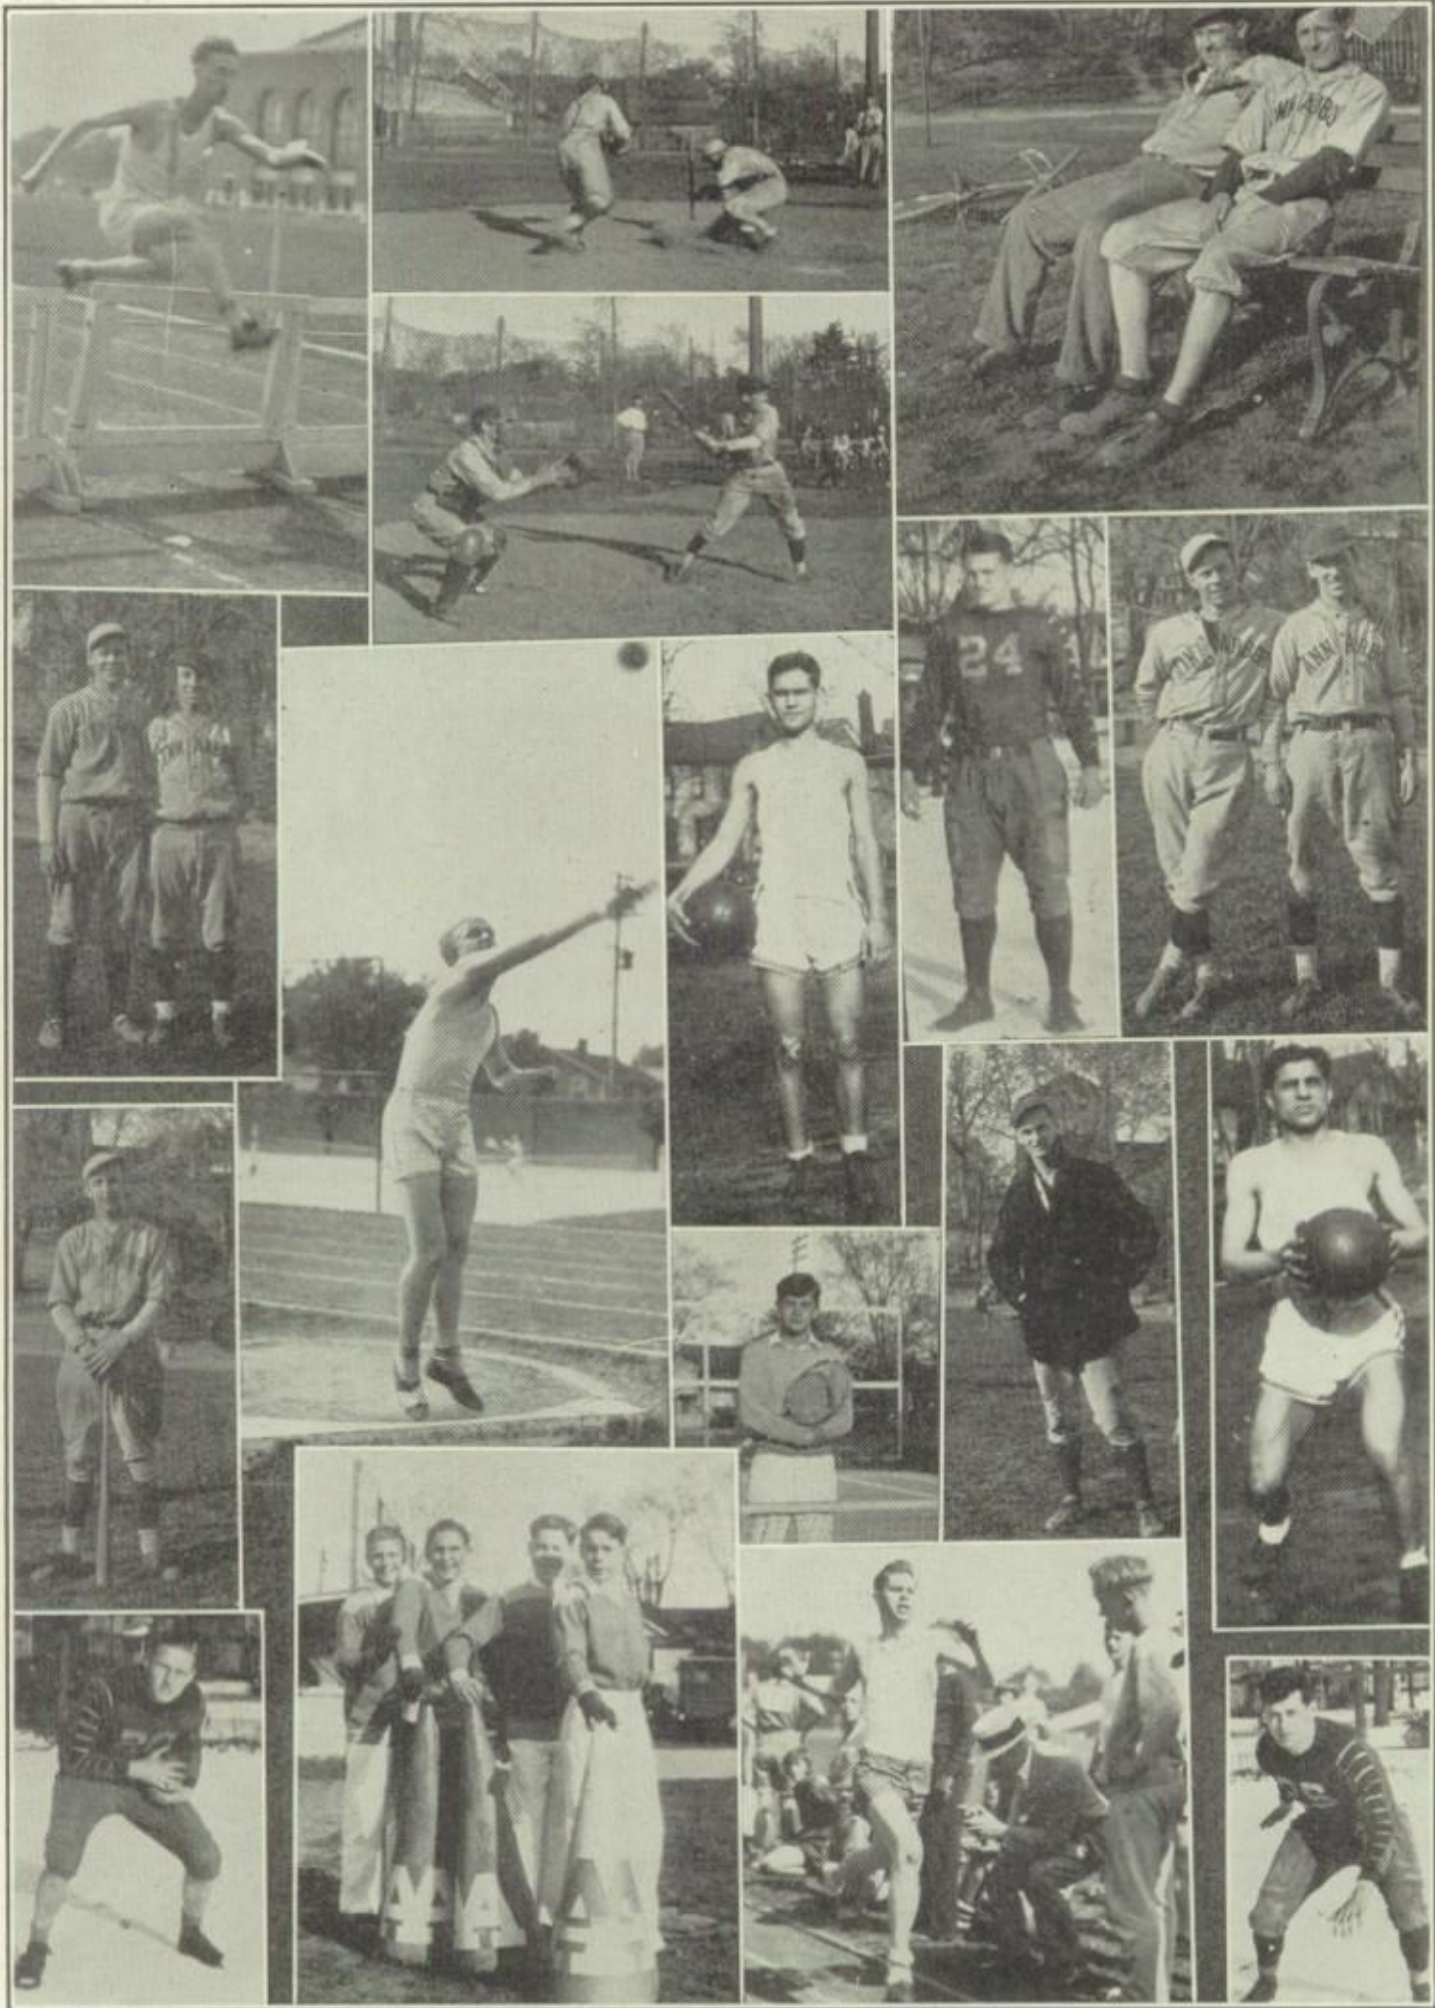

In the fourth game the Seniors nearly upset the Sophomores' hopes for the championship, but a last-minute rally made the score 17 to 16 in favor of the latter. The Sophomores then cinched the championship by defeating a weakened Junior team. The Seniors, playing with a totally revamped team, downed the Juniors, leaving these two teams tied for second place. The play-off resulted in a victory for the Seniors, giving the Seniors second place and the Juniors third place.

11. Mr. Jurien Hoekstra entertains with an excellent group of songs.
15. We drop the jinx. Ann Arbor 29, Owosso 6. Too late now!
18. Touchstone presents a touching tragedy, "The Valiant."
21. Debate trio wins second scrap of the season from Ypsi.
25. Geoffrey F. Morgan gives an inspiring speech. Marks again. Some students sat down rather carefully.
26. Lunch room has a rival! Everybody dashes for Jackson game tickets. Thanksgiving party! Lots of pep.
27. Some eat turkey at home, but most of us eat "hot dogs" at Jackson. Great game. Jackson entertains with lots of slush and other little pleasantries.
30. Hi-Y boys attend conference in Battle Creek. B. C. girls are O. K.!

DECEMBER

2. Shakespearean Circle presents "Evening Dress Indispensable." Some comedy!
3. Pessimist's out. Oh, those cracks!
4. Why the cops? Oh! Oh! Somebody borrowed the fire extinguishers to put out a fire on Thayer Street.

5. Honor Banquet for distinguished students. Good eats! Cadagan entertains with acrobatic stunts from his chair.
6. Hi-Y-Colonnade dance. What music those "Owls" can hoot! Jo Kennedy's clever decorations surely put a new tone to the old mass-hall.
8. Who said Ann Arbor's needy were going unclothed and starving? Not unless our shoes, clothing, and food showers are forgotten.
12. Lansing Eastern wins debate from Ann Arbor.
20. Many classes have vacations, as teachers suffer from ills and injuries.

22. Christmas play, "The Troubadour's Dream," is outstanding assembly entertainment of the month.

- 26-31. Much gayety and loss of knowledge during vacation.

JANUARY

1. And 1931 crawls in on all fours.
2. Skies begin to look dark! Fordson 24, Ann Arbor 16.
3. This is bad! Battle Creek 25, Ann Arbor 17.
6. Jack Showler is seriously injured in a fall. Here's for a quick recovery, old boy!
8. Debaters come out with flying colors against Ferndale.
9. Coming out of their lethargy, Ann Arbor defeats U. of D. High quintet 26-18.
15. Prof. Landon gives literary impersonations in assembly.
16. Mrs. Fisher addresses the first International Forum with many interesting facts about India.
23. Prison rivals here to engage with Purple and White in thrilling battle. Fate is against us, 15-14.
24. The days
25. of
26. exams
27. are here
28. and here.
29. Make-up day. Hard luck for the unfortunate.
30. Our day of judgment. Credit slips (and some that weren't). Evening party entertains those who stayed home from the Port Huron game.

FEBRUARY

2. Easy sliding, only ten-minute classes. Oh, the assignments, though! Teachers have hearts in their feet.
2. Ground hog day.
3. Regular classes. Regular line, "I couldn't study, as the book wasn't in."
4. "Cal" hits the nail on the head when he says, "Teachers are tough." "That isn't all! They say you have to wear Eskimo suits in Mr. Nelson's history classes."
4. Mothers visit school. Why???
5. Wanted a German book with penciled translation.
6. Chain-store trio wins from Lincoln Park.
7. Powerful Capital boys down "Kip's" warriors to the waltz of 30-18.
10. Corporal Sullivan proves what a discouraging occupation crime is with the modern police equipment.
11. Omega sells all available subscriptions. Put your pennies back!
13. The Girls' Fancy Dress party's a whiz! The girls split the ceiling when "Eva" begs a quarter of Miss Duff.

13. Battle Creek hands the Taylorman the eighth court defeat.
17. Cry for freedom in assembly causes riot. We're not jail birds. Why can't we be free?
20. Ann Arbor debaters triumphed over Mt. Clemens in second elimination series. Whoops! Only a few more points to go.
20. Purple squad out-fight Lansing Central team in two overtime periods. Enthusiastic rooters dern near shake the old gym down.

20. Five warblers represent A. A. in National High School Chorus.
24. Dr. Adams tells of the Revolutionary War. Funny how such a frail creature as a woman could have led Arnold astray.

26. Bishop Remington of Oregon talks religion with a punch.
27. Mat-dusters capture fourth place in state meet.

MARCH

1. Not so lucky with Lansing Eastern. Odds against us.
2. After a rally, Ann Arbor comes out in the lead against Ypsi.
5. Budding young firemen display genius in fighting Thayer street fire. Young Schneeberger is squelched by falling mattress.
6. We lose our athletic idol and companion with the unexpected death of Ronald Tupper.
7. Several members of the Optimist staff journey to Flint for annual convention.
10. Miss Bell addresses students on African education.
11. The band learns a new piece.
14. First regional meet puts us out of the game. Heart-breaking attack of Lansing Eastern wins by 17-20.
15. Miss Wisehart issues call for extemporaneous speakers.

AN INSPIRATION

NOWADAYS the colossal skyscraper is the admiration of all who observe. It towers in radiant splendor high above the level of surrounding structures. Annuals, too, are like that. Books with the "modern feel" today are soaring head and shoulders above the crowd, in the competitive field of school publications. The Service Engraving Company takes pleasure in presenting this book as an example of our work.
